Happy Birthday To Have Thin Ankles No Drink in Boys' Schools Germany's New Boat

TODAY is Prohibition's 10th birthday.

Congressman Beck, Republican from Pennsylvania, formerly solicitor-general, says prohibition can't be enforced "because it is contrary to human nature."

Prohibitionists reply that the same thing would have been said when the human race was trying to free itself from cannibalism; and when the attempt was first made to close up wide open red light districts. Nevertheless cannibalism went; and red light districts have at least put out their red lights.

In accordance with President Hoover's views, Congressman Williamson seeks to shift enforcement of prohibition from the Treasury to the Department of Justice.

That is common sense. When beer, whiskey and gin meant a great revenue for the government, it was the business of the Treasury to collect the money and prevent moonshining.

Now that beer and whiskey have been pushed into the criminal code and become the foundation of the great crime wave, whiskey crimes, like other crimes, should be handled by the Department of Justice.

Dr. Olga Stastny of Omaha, "official physician to America's organized business women," says working girls should learn to "loaf like a man." Women, to be successful, must learn to sit as men do "with their heels on a desk higher than their heads and relax."

Many, including probably John D. Rockefeller and Herbert Hoover, have succeeded without putting their heels higher than their heads during business hours. And a considerable number of "heels-higher-than-heads" young gentlemen are far from success.

The point is, however, that putting heels higher than heads will "change girls' thick ankles into thin ankles." Girls will pay attention to that.

This, however, is no "flat contradiction" of Dr. Olga Stastny. She is an admirable woman, six feet tall, "remarkable in strength and intelligence, and did wonders just after the war taking care of 10,000 Armenian refugees."

By the way, she probably never put her heels on a desk in her life. She is too busy.

Referring to increase of drunkenness among young people, it was mentioned here that head masters of big preparatory schools, Groton, St. Mark's Lawrenceville, Choate and others, could give information as to the youthful drinking.

In those preparatory schools, well managed in the hands of competent masters, there is, needless to say, no drinking by the boys. It will not be tolerated for a moment. Any boy found with liquor in his possession would be instantly dismissed. And the honor system among boys prevents drinking or any dealing with bootleggers, regardless of regulation.

But when those boys go home for vacation, they see what happens in the homes, and at young people's parties. They know what the older brothers and sisters do. And they tell the head masters.

Germany puts the new powerful cruiser Kouelm in commission, a cruiser more powerful than any of those we are planning to build.

The Kouelm, 6000 tons, carries among other weapons, nine six-inch guns and 12 torpedo tubes. Electric welding takes the place of riveting, which will interest American steel engineers. Welding reduces weight.

The six-inch guns fire in groups of three. Germany does not intend to stay down.

MacDonald advocates "ultimate complete abolition of battleships." Wise MacDonald.

Why pay fifty million dollars, as we do in this country, to build an expensive, entirely useless target for a bombing aeroplane?

When the automobile came in some foolishly bought at low prices, second-hand, nice rubber tired broughams, etc.

Our Government, more foolish, buys brand-new steel battleships, although their usefulness died long ago.

Another cut in the cost of travel by air. The Transcontinental Air Transporta. on its "air-rail-weather" trip "Around the Americas," cuts $100 off the price of a 16-day tour.

Air transportation is getting down to a business basis.

PROHIBITION FAILS, WORD TO HOOVER

Resolution Adopted at Faneuil Hall After Killings Are Denounced

A ringing challenge to prohibition and denunciation of the deaths that have followed in its train reverberated in Faneuil Hall, the cradle of liberty, today.

While the W. C. T. U. was holding a "victory" luncheon at Hotel Brunswick, men and women packed historic Faneuil Hall to capacity "in memorium of the death of liberty and the killings of 1,253 citizens in the still war of prohibition."

As speakers at the "dry" gathering appeared "not one accusation against the 18th amendment can be proved," Gen. Clarence R. Edwards appealed for "laws that are promulgated by ballots and not enforced by bullets."

With a roar of approval, the Faneuil Hall meeting adopted a resolution to be sent to President Hoover, the Congress, Governor Allen and every member of the local legislature declaring that prohibition has failed and pledging itself to the repeal of the Baby Volstead act.

RESOLUTION TO HOOVER

The resolution read:

"Whereas, the 18th Amendment to the Federal Constitution and the Federal Volstead Act, enacted for its enforcement, is a failure throughout the nation, and,

"Whereas, the attempted enforcement of this policy has retarded the cause of temperance, created chaos and disorder, and debauched the public service, therefore

"Be it resolved, That this meeting, individually and collectively, protests against the further continuance of the policy of national

On This Tenth Anniversary of Prohibition the Results of the Policy Should Be Considered

TODAY is the 10th anniversary of our national prohibition policy, and this is an opportune time for the American people to consider carefully—even prayerfully—what the effect of that policy has been upon the life of the nation.

There is no use discussing the prohibition question either with fanatical wets or fanatical drys. Extremists on either side are inaccessible to argument or to the logic of the situation.

But the vast majority of our people are not extremists of any kind. They are moderate, sensible, conservative people, not fanatically committed to any particular plan, but anxious to accomplish beneficial results in whatever appears to be the best and most effective manner.

Therefore, while extreme wets and extreme drys are in the heat of violent argument and still more violent action, it behooves the moderate majority of our people to consider the prohibition situation calmly and decide whether prohibition is operating for the benefit of our people and our country, and whether it is actually accomplishing the results which were desired and hoped for when it was put into operation.

THE Hearst papers have been active crusaders for temperance for 40 years.

The sincerity and effectiveness of their sustained temperance campaign were amply established by the use made of their editorials and articles and cartoons by the various churches and temperance organizations throughout the country for many years.

To be sure, the policy of the Hearst papers was never prohibition, but rather education.

We believed that the American people could be persuaded into abandoning the excessive use of alcohol better than they could be forced into abandoning it.

Our policy was to eliminate the saloons and to substitute for hard liquors the certainly less injurious beverages, light wines and beers.

WE thought we had Scriptural authority for our attitude, in that Christ, on a festal occasion, had turned water into wine; but never to the extent of our Biblical knowledge, had He ever turned water into whiskey or brandy or rum or gin.

Therefore, according to our belief and our interpretation of the Bible, Christ had thought wine a harmless beverage, but had never indicated any approval of strong liquors.

But there were other than Biblical reasons for the Hearst papers advocating light wines and beers and opposing any stronger drink.

The Hearst papers believe that the abolition of the saloon and of hard liquor and the tolerance of light wines and beers was the best program for the promotion of temperance; because under this program comparatively harmless light wines and beers would be substituted for the hard liquor, which had been the curse of the country.

Furthermore, the Hearst papers feared, and repeatedly expressed the fear, that prohibition would have just the opposite effect, and would substitute highly injurious hard liquors for comparatively harmless light wines and beers.

THE reason for this opinion on the part of the Hearst papers was, first, that this had been the effect in states where prohibition already prevailed; and second, because it was a perfectly obvious and natural result, due to the physical fact that hard liquors are easy to make illicitly, and easy to transport and deal in illicitly, on account of their concentrated character, while light wines and beers, on account of their highly diluted character, and consequent bulk, were difficult to transport or illicitly dispose of.

When the policy of prohibition was adopted, however, the Hearst papers deemed it their duty to see that the experiment had a fair trial.

But, after 10 years' trial, the Hearst papers deem it equally their duty to analyze the situation impartially, and to find out definitely whether prohibition has been a success from the temperance point of view of its sponsors, or whether it has actually operated—as the Hearst papers feared it might operate—as an obstacle, rather than an aid, to true temperance.

IN studying the situation, we must necessarily consider, not only the experience of this country, but the experience of other countries which have tried prohibition.

And the first thing we find is that every country which has ever tried prohibition has finally abandoned it, because it did not accomplish its object.

The question, then, narrows down to whether or not this is the one country which has had a different experience from all other countries?

Statistics—that is to say, recorded facts—would seem to indicate that the experience of this country is not different from that of other countries.

Recorded facts seem clearly to indicate that there is more drunkenness and worse drunkenness after the 10-year experiment with prohibition than there was before prohibition.

And if the speakeasy may be considered a saloon, there exist today, in at least all the larger centers of population, more saloons and worse saloons than existed before prohibition went into effect.

THE reason there are more speakeasies than there were saloons is because speakeasies acknowledge no legal limitations of numbers or locations, and the reason the speakeasies are worse than the saloons is because speakeasies are subject to no legal or moral supervision of any kind.

Young people could not go into saloons, no matter how sordid the saloons were; but young people can go into speakeasies; and some speakeasies subsist on the patronage of young people, and are placed as pitfalls near the schools and at special places, where young people are likely to patronize them.

Furthermore, if one of the legitimate objects of prohibition was the health of the community, certainly that object has not been attained; because mild wines and light beers, which were comparatively harmless and might even have been, in moderation, healthful, have been eliminated from consumption, and bad, and often poisonous bootleg liquor substituted in their places.

THE death list from bad liquor is only a slight indication of the harm inflicted upon the health of the community by the very general consumption, not only of strong liquor, but poisonous liquor.

So that prohibition has not only failed as a temperance measure, but has utterly failed as a sanitary measure, and disastrously failed as a moral measure.

There is another aspect of prohibition to be considered, and a very vital aspect to a

POLICE USE THEIR CLUBS ON 'REDS' IN N. BEDFORD

Lawrence Man Among Prisoners Seized in Class Outside Gates of Mill

New Bedford, Jan. 16—Sixteen Communists, including several women, were arrested and the heads of half a dozen of them were split open with police clubs shortly after noon today when a riot resulted from an attempt of organizers of the National Textile Workers' Union to stage a demonstration.

The riot occurred in front of the Dartmouth mill when 50 policemen with drawn clubs, led by Deputy Chief of Police Raymond Chase, charged 100 alleged Communists as they attempted to hold a meeting there in protest against the arrest of five of their companions yesterday.

It was estimated that 6000 persons were in the vicinity of the mill when the clash between the demonstrators and the police took place. Most of the crowd were curious spectators drawn to the scene by advance publicity that trouble was likely to result from the proposed demonstration.

One of the most prominent persons arrested was Fred Beale of Lawrence, who is now on $20,000 bail from North Carolina, where he was recently convicted of second degree murder growing out of the mill riots in Gastonia.

Those whose heads were clubbed in the clash were treated by physicians in the hospital connected with police headquarters.

LEADERS ARE SEIZED

Before the clash Chief of Police Samuel D. McLeod said he would not compromise with the demonstrators and that he was "sick and tired of hearing the American flag insulted" by speakers who urged that it be "torn down and the red flag put in its place."

The mill in front of which today's affray took place was the only cotton mill in this city where the operatives did not go out on strike two years ago during the big textile battle.

Martin Russak, district organizer of the union, was another of those arrested. Both Beale and Russak were hailed by the police at the very outset of their remarks. Russak was taken from an improvised platform in front of the mill gates in Cove st. as he uttered the words, "In the name of the National Textile Workers' Union and the Communist party." He was the first arrested.

The confusion, caused by his arrest was still apparent when Beale mounted a camp chair and said, "I bring you a message of the great fight of the southern workers—" Policemen closed in on him and placed him under arrest.

Beale has been in New Bedford and vicinity much of the time since his liberation on following his conviction at Gastonia, N. C., growing out of the killing of the chief of police in that town.

MEMBERS ARE SOUGHT.

"We shall employ the same tactics in New Bedford as we did in Gastonia," Russak told newspapermen yesterday, in speaking of the demonstration planned for today.

The union of which he is organizer is engaged in a campaign for members here. There is no textile trouble in the mills of this city, although many of the Higher Sugar Duties Killed by Senate

Washington, Jan. 16 (INS)—Protesting against any increase of the cost of filling the American sugar bowl, the Senate this afternoon rejected all proposed increases in the sugar duties carried in the new tariff bill.

On motion of Sen. Harrison (D.) of Mississippi, the Senate approved retention of the rate of $1.76 per hundred pounds on Cuban imports as carried in existing law.

Its action specifically rejected the House Cuban rate of $2.40 and the Senate finance committee's recommendation for a Cuban rate of $2.20 per hundred pounds.

The vote was 48 against increase.

FANEUIL HALL RINGS OUT CHALLENGE IN RUM WAR KILLINGS

prohibition and demands a return to temperance, law and order.

"Be it further resolved, That this meeting pledges itself to the repeal of the so-called Baby Volstead Act in Massachusetts and that copies of this resolution be sent to President Hoover, the Governor of Massachusetts, every member of Congress and every member of the state Legislature."

While Mrs. Ellen A. Gleason, honorary president of the W. C. T. U., was stating that modern crimes existed before prohibition, Conrad W. Crooker, general counsel of the Liberal Civic League, Inc., declared the Faneuil Hall meeting issued "an unmistakable challenge that even in the name of Holy Prohibition, 'Thou Shalt Not Kill.'"

The Faneuil Hall meeting was featured by the impressive ceremony of reading the roll call by states of those who were killed in the enforcement of prohibition.

SOLEMN ROLL CALL.

It was a solemn ritual, gone through slowly and impressively, following the invocation by Rev. Roland D. Sawyer of Ware, member of the General Court, and an outline of the purposes of the meeting by Mr. Crooker.

Prior to the opening of the exercises, the bell on the historic edifice was tolled at intervals for five minutes, and the Stars and Stripes flew at half staff.

Many of the men who attended wore black armbands and black ties, while there was a surprisingly large number of women in the crowd which filled the hall and overflowed to the street outside.

Inside a dozen movietone cameras recorded the scene and the speeches, made by Gen. Edwards, Mr. Crooker, Congressman John C. Schafer of Wisconsin and A. Fitz Roy Anderson of New York city.

Congressman Schafer declared the American people are now spending more money for more alcoholic beverages than they ever did before prohibition.

He added that every citizen who approves the execution of the law violator without due process of law and not in self defense, by a "hair-trigger law enforcement agent," is a criminal at heart.

"Hair-trigger prohibition enforcement agents," he said, have repeatedly condemned, convicted and executed innocent people, as well as guilty law violators, without due process of law."

Snuffing out the lives of law-abiding citizens in this manner, Congressman said, parallels the atrocities of the most savage tribes.

The proceedings were not broadcast but a battery of amplifiers carried every word to all parts of the hall and to the throng outside, where a detail of police kept order.

PLAYS BATTLE HYMN

Walter Smith's band furnished music, between the speeches, which were punctuated with cheers of approval from the solidly packed throngs who sat and stood in every available spot in the hall.

The meeting opened with an introduction by the chairman, William H. Mitchell, after which the band played the "Battle Hymn of The Republic."

In outlining the purposes of the meeting Mr. Crooker said:

"Prohibition, in the light of bitter experience in this country, has been tried and found wanting. It has retarded temperance and created disorder.

"Prohibition is a failure in every state in the union. The handwriting is on the wall. Whenever and wherever the people of the United States have been given the opportunity to express their will they have rejected prohibition by an ever-increasing majority.

"The public service of the nation has been debauched. Eighty thousand citizens were arrested last year for violation of the 18th amendment. The underworld has been made rich and powerful. Now the government is openly declares its intention to take $50,000,000 of the people's money to provide shotguns, machine guns and bullets to enforce this law.

"The people of the nation are rising to protest. We are living in a virtual reign of terror. No man is safe from suspicion. No house is immune from search. On land and on sea American citizens are subject to this unwarrantable enforcement.

WORSE THAN '98 WAR

"More Americans have been killed in 10 years through prohibition enforcement than were killed in the Spanish War. This cannot and shall not continue.

"Everywhere the cry is going up: 'Get us back to temperance. Get us back to law.' If the people had not risen against unjust laws then would have been no Magna Charta, no French Republic, no United States, no President Hoover.

"The time is at hand for a reckoning. This meeting protests the continuance of this system and issues an unmistakable challenge that even in the name of Holy Prohibition 'Thou Shalt Not Kill.'"

Then followed the roll call of the dead by states, the "Marseillaise" by the band and Gen. Edwards' address, entitled "After Ten Years."

GEN. EDWARDS' SPEECH

"We are gathered here, not in a joyful and jubilant mood," said Gen. Edwards. "We do not recognize the regime of recklessness and ruin of a decade of prohibition as one that calls for a jubilee and jollification.

"The loss of over 1500 human lives and the destruction of thousands of dollars' worth of private property that have attended the enforcement of this law demand the most serious consideration and reflection of all thoughtful and decent citizens.

"The wanton disregard for and disastrous deprivation of the inherent and sacred rights of you and me as citizens of this great republic must not be ignored any longer."

After declaring his views were "free from the prejudice of any sinister influence," the general praised the temperate conduct of members of the Yankee Division on their recent pilgrimage to Europe.

He referred to a beverage list handed him in a dining car upon his return, which contained mineral waters and a well-known headache remedy, as "America's offering to her manhood."

While stationed at Panama, Gen. Edwards said, he established an enlisted men's club, where light wines were served. "What had been a veritable hell was transformed into a community of sober, industrious men," he said.

BACKS CANADA SYSTEM.

He praised government control of liquor in Canada and Sweden, and said it would require annual appropriations of $500,000,000 and a force greater than the present army and navy to enforce prohibition in this country.

He said he opposed the suggested placing of 10,000 armed men along the 3,000,000 unguarded Canadian border.

"Are we to lose the friendship and co-operation of those splendid citizens of the provinces and receive in exchange their enmity, their suspicion and their hostility?" he asked.

Referring to the subject of equal opportunity for all, he said:

"I am impressed with the evidence of increasing graft and opportunities for illegal and illicit wealth during these days of prohibition. The riches of the underworld so flagrantly flaunted before us in our large cities, and the retirement of law enforcement officials in possession of enormous fortunes can do nothing but break down the morale of our hardworking, industrious citizens.

"How can we talk seriously about the rewards of honest labor when on all sides we are encountered with examples of individuals and groups of individuals who have piled up a material affluence only rivalled by that of the monarchs of old, wholly and solely by means of violating a law that is absolutely non-enforceable?

FOR STATE REPEAL

"The time has surely come for America to stop this flow of criminal profiteering, and to use every means possible to remove this cancerous growth which is slowly and surely gnawing away at the very vitals of the nation.

"Referring to the state enforcement act, he said:

"Get rid of this useless, unnecessary and ineffective piece of legislation.

"In doing so you will serve notice that Massachusetts stands convinced that prohibition is a failure and that some immediate remedy must be obtained to eliminate the entire prohibitory structure.

"Governmental regulation strikes one as the most effective remedy we can work for. Let us enjoy what has been accomplished by ballots and not enforced by bullets."

ANDERSON'S ADDRESS

Mr. Anderson said in part:

"Here in this holy place of Faneuil Hall, peopled with the spirits of those great Americans who laid the foundations of our liberties, we have come together to protest the killings of those whose death—at the hands of Congress—they applaud.

"Never has hell adorned its halls of justice with more satanic figures of statesmen than can be found in our own legislative forums who have given an applaud the deaths of their fellow men and where they so freely brand their countrymen as criminals and who vote they so legislate that they do but intensify the evils they pretend to destroy.

"And to think there are those who call themselves Americans and Christians who, as public men, who would so uplift their fellowmen, among them even those who wear the cloth of men of God, who would so interpret the compassion of the Saviour of mankind.

TRIBUTE TO J. D. "DADDY"

"Broken-hearted, in despair over the wrong, the oppression, the sin and corruption rife throughout the land, I came last week to sit at the feet of your great general, to look into his kindly face and to learn why you loved him so. I found in his handclasp the strength I needed, oh, so much.

"I heard him repeat those words of the great emancipator and then I knew Liberty was not dead, and as I listened to him he seemed once again to draw his sword—that sword which knows no rust or stain in the service of his country—flashing once again as in battle he pointed the way to victory.

"I seemed to see him among those making their way to the grave of the Unknown Soldier—there to pledge upon his honor that he would keep the faith in defending his branch of service from such disgrace as has come to that great humanitarian body, whose mission has ever been to succor the distressed but which prohibition has degraded to take lives inhumanly.

"Here I stood by your great soldier's side I seemed to hear once again the impassioned words of Adams, of Warren and of Otis.

"Once again the light appeared in the Old North Church and I heard the flying hoofs and the cry of Paul Revere piercing the quietness of our land—'Wake up, Americans! Your liberties are in danger —the glorious blessings we fought and died for—of Life, Liberty and happiness are being crushed beneath the tyranny of oppression and wrong.

"We left you a free people and now we find you a nation of cowards and hypocrites practicing your liberties in the dark and hidden places behind drawn shades where you teach your children false standards, false ideals.

"Where is the justice we cherished, where is the freedom we loved? We gave you a government to serve your every desire for happiness and liberty—we find you now enslaved by despots who cruelly lash you into submission even unto death—a death made ghastly by their hideous applause.

republic; and that is the civic aspect, the political aspect, the patriotic aspect.

Prohibition has led to widespread invasion of the rights and liberties of a free people.

It has substituted tyranny for liberty and despotism for democracy.

It has violated the sanctity of the home, and made every man and every man's house and every man's family subject to a system of espionage that is only equaled by that of Russia.

Prohibition has made our President a dictator, executing an unpopular law by force of arms.

It has made our congressmen cowards and hypocrites, passing more and more oppressive excise laws, while themselves carrying whiskey flasks in their hip-pockets.

It has made our federal enforcement officers ofttimes murderers and ofttimes drunken murderers, ofttimes themselves saturated with liquor, while taking human life in the enforcement of laws against liquor.

Prohibition has increased crime enormously, startlingly, dangerously; and has, moreover, supplied the money with which crime operates, not only in the liquor traffic, but in other departments of criminal activity.

Prohibition has filled our jails with young boys, and has associated them with hardened criminals, so that youths, who were committed merely for misdemeanors, may be graduated as expert criminals.

Prohibition has corrupted our police system, until in many cases the police are the active allies of the law-breaking elements of the community.

Prohibition has deprived our courts to a great degree of the respect of the community as instruments of even-handed justice and agencies for sympathetic correction and reform.

Prohibition has divided our people into factions almost as bitterly hostile to each other as the factions that existed before the Civil War.

AND in the face of this shocking situation, so dangerous to our peace and safety, to our health and morals, to our rights and liberties, to our very existence as a democratic state, our President stands all oblivious and calls for more safe-cement, more jails and more, injustice, more courts and more arrests, more incarceration of harmless youths to be transmuted into hardened criminals, more shotguns and more machine guns, more gunmen and more murders, more outrage of civic rights, more violation of constitutional liberties.

To what end and for what purpose?

Merely to aggravate and intensify the disastrous conditions which already exist?

IS it not about time that the calm, conservative, moderate majority of our people quietly and judiciously took stock of prohibition and determined whether this policy is worth all the trouble, and all the evil that it has caused?

If prohibition had actually accomplished a great moral reform, a great sanitary benefit, a great temperance improvement, then it might possibly be worth the death, disaffection, the civic disruption that it has caused.

It might possibly be worth the sacrifice of the political liberties, which our fathers won in blood and suffering, and bequeathed as a precious inheritance to their children.

It might possibly be worth the epidemic of cowardice and corruption in our public life.

It might possibly be worth the substitution of the rule of force for the rule of reason.

It might possibly be worth any civic or patriotic sacrifice that we have made or could make.

BUT if prohibition has not accomplished moral reforms or sanitary benefits, and has not improved temperance conditions, in what does the sanctity of such a policy lie that we should sacrifice for its empty name our treasured American principles and institutions?

Must this nation, which went into the war "to make the world safe for democracy," sacrifice its own democracy in a fratricidal conflict at home?

We have heard enough from fools and fanatics!

(Signed) WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

UTILITY BOARD OPPOSES N. E. RAIL MERGER

No Need of Consolidation Emphasized in Report to Legislature

Insofar as the interests of the people of New England are concerned, there is no occasion to consolidate the railroads here with other systems at the present time, the State Department of Public Utilities today advised the legislature in its annual report.

The commission declares the experience of the New England railroads in the last several years indicates they can be made self-sustaining.

"When the Transportation Act was passed in 1920," the report states, "there was a very pronounced view, upon the part of the financial interests, that there was little hope of rehabilitating the New England railroad system without the assistance of strong transcontinental systems.

"Experience indicates these views were wrong and we have the conviction there is at the present time no advantage to the people of New England in the consolidation of any of the New England railroads with other systems, except possibly in a New England system."

The commission declared there is nothing in the transportation act which requires the roads to consolidate.

"Consequently, we feel that, unless conditions materially change, it is better that the New England railroads remain as they are," the commission advises.

On the whole, the commission finds, the railroads in the state of Massachusetts had a prosperous year, with the exception of the Central Vermont and possibly the Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Co.

In the street railway field, the commission finds companies in country districts and thinly settled areas have continued to abandon street railway tracks and to substitute bus service. The Boston, El. it says, has also continued to establish more bus routes as feeders to its main lines, abandoning trackage.

The commission reports 15 municipal gas and electric plants which it says, from reports filed in 1928 and 1928, appear to have violated the provisions of the statutes requiring them to reduce their rates when the plants have earned a profit in excess of the 8 per cent allowed by law.

The list follows:

Belmont, Braintree, Brantree, Concord, Groveland, Hingham, Littleton, Marblehead, Merrimac, Middleton, North Attleboro, Oxford, Peabody, South Hadley, Templeton, Wellesley.

Also a list of gas, electric and water companies that have violated the law by failing to file their annual reports within the limit prescribed by law.

to 38 for it. Senators Walsh and Gillett of Massachusetts were both recorded against the proposed increase.

The Senate's action, Harrison said, would save the American people $54,700,000 a year in the cost of their sugar supply.

The result stunned administration leaders who expected the vote to be close. The wide margin against an increase in duties was the result of Republican disaffection. Eighteen Republicans, nine of them prominent, united against the finance committee's recommendation.

It was gently whispered that the revolt was due to a fear on the part of these senators that a vote for higher duties would hurt them seriously in their campaigns for re-election this fall.

Nine of the insurgent bloc voted against any increase, while three, Frazier, Howell and Nye, with the Independent, Johnson, voted for the increase.

sanatarium two years ago, but according to his friends he had apparently recovered his health and was believed ready to resume his studies.

His family removed to Concord from Brookline only a few months ago.

Young Gierasch's brother David is engaged in Salt Lake City, Utah. A sister, Dorothea Gierasch, is attending art school in Philadelphia, and there are two other brothers, Walter and Edward.

During his freshman year at Harvard Robert Gierasch achieved the distinction of receiving five A's at the midyear examinations. He found time for athletics, however, and was captain of the freshman soccer team.

The young man was described as being popular in society, although quiet and sometimes moody.

ers are opposed to the speeding up process that followed the widespread strike here two years ago.

After the demonstration had been broken up Chief of Police McLeod said that textile organizers "were coming into New Bedford to make trouble."

"We don't care what they say," said the chief, "but we do care for what they do."

In addition to Organizers Beale and Russak the following mill workers were arrested: Peter Hagelis, August G. Pinto, Germaine Almeida, Frank Gomes, John Milan, Manuel Perry, Frank Afanjo and Helen Okan.

Others arrested were Joseph Noveau, John Neto, Antone Lisbond, Kaye Byers, John Vincent and George Gill of Gastonia, N. C., who was indicted in connection with the mill riots in that city.

GIRL AMONG PRISONERS

All of those arrested are charged with disturbing the peace and loitering. Additional charges may be preferred against some of them before they are arraigned in court tomorrow.

Miss Okan, one of the two young women arrested, is a resident of New York city. She is 19 years of age. She came here to help organize the workers. Five weeks ago she served a jail sentence of a week after refusing to pay a fine of $10 for loitering.

August G. Pinto, another of those seized today, was arrested 27 times during the strike four years ago.

6000 Chicago Cops Go Payless; no Funds

Chicago, Jan. 16 (INS)—Six thousand policemen and their officers today went without their pay in Chicago. The city treasury had not sufficient money to pay them.

"There will be no payday until Feb. 6 and commanding officers will govern themselves accordingly," was the message sent out by Commissioner William Russell. The city is without money until the passage of the law for sale of tax anticipation warrants.

MOVE TO REPEAL DRY LAW; IT'S CALLED DEAD

Two in Congress Lead in an Effort to Get Act Off the Books

Washington, Jan. 16 (INS)—Developments tumbled over each other in the prohibition "war," today as the "noble experiment" ended its 10th year. Two determined efforts to scratch the 18th amendment off the book of American statutes furnished most of the fireworks.

In the House Representative LaGuardia (R.) of New York launched a fight declaring the prohibition amendment null and void on the basis of its own language, and the ground he took seems certain to precipitate prolonged and heated debate.

In the Senate the anniversary was observed by introduction of a resolution by Senator Blaine (R.) of Wisconsin, repealing the 18th amendment on the simple ground that "repeal is the best cure for the evils of prohibition."

LaGuardia's impending move has caused considerable consternation in the ranks of the drys. He has announced his intention of moving on a point of order to strike out all further appropriations for the enforcement of the anti-liquor laws.

He contends that the 18th amendment passed out of existence three years ago by virtue of its phraseology.

LAGUARDIA'S GROUND

He contends that only 10 states actually ratified the amendment itself; that the rest of the necessary 36 acted instead upon the Sheppard joint resolution, and that Section 3 of the Sheppard resolution, later became Section 3 of the amendment, which reads: "This article shall be inoperative unless it shall have been ratified as an amendment to the constitution within seven years from the date of the submission hereof to the States by the Congress."

Blaine made his move on this 10th "dry" birthday more as a gesture of protest. Preliminary to introduction of his resolution he pointed out that 15 countries have tried prohibition within the last 20 years, and all but the United States, Finland and Prince Edward Island abandoned it after trials approximating 10 years.

It was significant, possibly, that this tenth milestone of prohibition failed to bring forth the statements so often issued in the past by leaders of the prohibition movement that the dry law had been a great help to business, bringing about temperance, reducing drunkenness and generally increasing the output of the laboring man.

CALL FOR MORE MONEY

Today, these leaders lifted their voices in a plea, instead, for more money, men and laws to aid enforcement, as the "noble experiment" begins its second decade.

Senator Harris (D.) of Georgia, who has insisted prohibition appropriations should be increased by $50,000,000, declared "prohibition never has had a fair trial."

He urged enactment of the various reforms which President Hoover and the law enforcement commission reported were necessary to bolster up the present "entirely inadequate" enforcement machinery.

Builders Apologize for Din in New York

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—There has been much ado about noise in the city and a special municipal commission is studying things, but the results so far have been apologies.

A bank erecting a skyscraper in Wall st. wrote neighbors regretting the din.

An apartment building in Gramercy Pk. bore a sign, "Our sincere apologies to our neighbors for the unavoidable annoyance this hammering must occasion."

LINDY PLANS HIGH ALTITUDE HOP TO CUT COAST-TO-COAST TIME

SEEKS HELP OF STRONG WINDS

Hopes to Solve Problem of Faster Transcontinental Travel by Air

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—Col Charles A. Lindbergh will see for himself whether aviation can link arms with the winds in the United States for speedier west-to-east air air travel.

That is the way the announcement made in Los Angeles that he would make a number of experimental high altitude flights in cooperation with naval meteorological experts at the Lakehurst, New Jersey, naval air station and the United States weather bureau was received here today.

It is understood at the weather bureau, which will furnish forecasts of meteorological conditions, that Col. Lindbergh plans a transcontinental flight in which he will test in his new low-wing monoplane whether aviation advances and knowledge of high altitude currents may be utilized for more rapid transit.

The service ceiling of his Lockheed Sirius racer is 25,000 feet and it may be possible to find in the increased altitude general air currents that will speed the plane to the Atlantic coast.

Surveys made by meteorologists with pilot balloons have established the existence of a preponderant number of westerly winds east of the Rockies, generally averaging 30 miles an hour between 20,000 and 25,000 feet altitude.

While high altitude soundings have generally been meagre, advances in plane and motor designs have made of the upper air a new field for exploitation and Col. Lindbergh's experiments may point to general high altitude flying for mail and passenger ships.

Meteorologists indicate that the prevailing westerlies may be utilized to speed transportation about one day in four, and it is not to be assumed that there is a daily wind with which to speed a plane. Moreover, since they are one-way currents, there would be no such aid in east-to-west flights.

The difficulty of high altitude flying will be the selection to stretches high enough where the strongest favorable currents may be utilized, but not so high that oxygen apparatus would have to be employed.

In passenger service it would not be practical to employ oxygen apparatus, it is pointed out, nor would it be possible to use it on flights of long duration without telling effects. Oxygen must generally be employed beyond the 25,000-foot mark.

WHELAN RICHES WIPED OUT

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Samuel Untermyer, attorney, said in a statement published today that the private fortunes of the family of George J. Whelan, founder of the United Cigar Stores, had been almost wiped out in the collapse of the market value of the company's stock.

He blamed the recent crash in Wall St. and the cigarette price war for the situation in the company's affairs. Control of the company recently passed from the Whelans to interests headed by George K. Morrow.

Other members of the family who were large stockholders and officers in the company were: C. A. Whelan, former chairman of the board and now a director; J. F. Whelan, Robert J. Whelan and E. Francis Whelan.

Mr. Untermyer, as counsel for the Whelan interests, issued the statement in reply to a financial report made by the new management and published reports concerning rumored examination of the company's accounts by the state attorney-general's office. He also said George J. Whelan has been seriously ill in a sanitarium for two months.

6 Firemen Overcome at Hospital Blaze

Chicago, Jan. 16 (INS)—Fire which broke out today in the basement of Mercy Hospital overcame six firemen and spread smoke throughout the first four floors of the hospital.

All six of the fire fighters are reported to be in serious condition. Ten other members of the fire company required medical treatment. Fourteen newly born babies had to be hastily removed from the obstetrics ward.

Perform Autopsy on Shooting Victim

Westerly, Jan. 16 (AP)—An autopsy was to be performed today on the body of Atwood Gardner, 28, who was shot and fatally wounded Tuesday night because he is said to have refused to obey a command to throw stones through the window of a house.

James Dericco, whom Gardner before his death identified as his assailant, is expected to be arraigned on a murder charge immediately after the autopsy.

9 Prohibition Years Cost 34,397 Lives

Washington, Jan. 16 (INS)—Ten of 28,083 alcoholism deaths for the years of constitutional prohibition are brought to a close with records established of 1397 lives lost directly through attempts to enforce the 18th amendment and approximately 35,000 deaths attributed to alcoholism.

How many thousands of additional lives have been sacrificed through drunken driving, liquor gang war killings, booting hi-jacking encounters and the countless other menaces growing out of the outlawed liquor traffic no one knows. Accurate statistics have never been compiled by any agency, governmental or otherwise, to reveal them. But it is certain that if they were compiled the totals would be staggering.

The deaths from attempted enforcement and from the consumption of hard liquors, however, have been gathered accurately and completely as it has been humanly possible to gather them.

The Washington Herald, a Hearst newspaper, has spent the last seven months gathering the enforcement casualties. It has specific records of 1397 cases. Its reports, however, cover only 92 per cent of the 3075 counties of the United States. Repeated efforts to get information from the other 8 per cent have been unavailing.

The missing counties are scattered across the continent. It is safe to assume that they had their death toll in proportion to the others. Applying the ratio for the 92 per cent to the missing 8 per cent would bring the enforcement deaths to beyond 1500.

The United States census bureau has compiled the deaths from alcoholism. These census figures have been gathered with the same authoritative accuracy that characterizes all other census bureau statistics.

The census record shows a total

Find Broker's Wife Died Accidentally

New York, Jan. 16 (INS)—Mrs. Harriet Mowry Adler, society matron, and estranged wife of a broker, died accidentally.

The autopsy on the body of the wealthy woman, found in the penthouse apartment of a motion picture director, today showed death resulted from the unnatural manner in which she held her head while intoxicated. The medical examiner said "acute alcoholism" combined with "postural asphyxia" caused her death. Dudley Murphy, the moving picture director, in whose apartment the tragedy occurred was previously exonerated as was his companion, John Barbour.

Two Sisters Hunted as Bootleggers

Strafford, Pa., Jan. 16 (AP)—Two sisters, still in their 'teens, were being sought by police today as rum runners. Warrants for the arrest of Marie Duttner, 19, and Violet, 17, are in the hands of Police Chief Nugent, who declared the girls had been engaged in running liquor by automobile between Philadelphia and Harrisburg.

DRY LEAGUE IS CALLED 'DIVINE'

Detroit, Jan. 16 (INS)—In commemoration of 10 years of prohibition, delegates attending the biennial convention of the Anti-Saloon League here continued today to manifest optimism and satisfaction in the work of their organization.

Declaring the Anti-Saloon League was born of God, Dr. F. Scott McBride, general superintendent, hailed prohibition as triumphant forever.

"The league will continue to carry the records and attitude of the candidates to the people until through their voices the lingering, lawless and lying liquor traffic, now an outlaw, surrenders to the law and the Constitution," said McBride, after his pronouncement of divine birth.

"Those things that are in the way of the progress of the Kingdom of God must get out of the way."

Chinese Crew Is Kept Under Guard

Fall River, Jan. 16—Private detectives today are guarding members of the Chinese crew on the British steamer Piskodon, Captain Dolton, to guarantee that none attempted to land in this country. The close guard on the crew will be maintained until the ship sails tomorrow after pumping out her cargo of gasolene at the Shell Eastern Petroleum Products, Inc., dock here.

Boy, 13, Hangs Self With Mother's Scarf

Coventry, R. I., Jan. 16—Richard Breen, 13, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Breen, committed suicide by tying one end of his mother's scarf about his throat, knotting the other to a doorknob and jumping from a trunk in such a manner as to break his neck.

Medical Examiner Benjamin F. Tefft said the boy apparently had grown morbid from hearing accounts of violent death. Young Breen was fascinated, his parents said, by reports of the death of Frank Weeden, insane lifer who recently committed suicide in his cell at Rhode Island State prison.

A short time before the Breen boy was found dead he had been listening to a phonograph record account of the slaying of Marion Parker and the subsequent execution of Edward Hickman for the crime.

Man Killed in Auto Crash, Brother Held

New Bedford, Jan. 16—Shortly after his brother, Donatien, 36, was killed in an automobile accident here today, Eudore Gaudette, 24, was arraigned in court on charges of drunkenness and operating an automobile so as to endanger public safety. He pleaded not guilty.

The car in which they were riding crashed into a truck parked at the side of the street early today. The younger brother who was at the wheel and another man, who was also in the car were unhurt.

POLICE HONOR SLAIN OFFICER AT FUNERAL

East Boston Church Filled to Overflowing and Banked With Floral Tributes

Fellow members of the police department and residents of East Boston today paid final tribute to Patrolman James J. Troy, shot to death in the performance of his duty.

With a full company of police officers as an escort, and with thousands of sorrowing citizens marching in attendance, Officer Troy was laid at rest in Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden, following services in the Church of the Sacred Heart, East Boston.

Mrs. Anna Miller Troy, widow of the slain policeman, who is about to become a mother for the fifth time, was present at the services, attended by Dr. Mitchell Sisson and Nurse Sophia Rosenblatt.

POLICE ESCORT

The cortege started from the house at 118 Brooks st., proceeding to Bennington st., to Putnam st., to Chelsea st., and back to Brooks st., where the church is located.

Motorcycle Officers Charles Evans and Frank Luzinsky cleared the road, and were followed by a full company of patrolmen from all stations in the city, headed by Capt. Louis Lutz, departmental drill master, assisted by Lieut. Thomas J. Cavanaugh and Sergt. Kelley of Division 21.

In the cortege were Police Commissioner Herbert A. Wilson, Superintendent Michael H. Crowley, Capt. Archibald Purcell of Division 7 and Capt. Martin King of Station 6, the slain officer's division commander who was on the detail with him when he was shot.

CROWD FILLS CHURCH

The crowd filled the church and overflowed to the sidewalk, standing with heads uncovered while solemn requiem high mass was celebrated by the Rev. Thomas C. Garrahan, with Rev. Thomas Dinn as deacon and Rev. J. J. Linnehan as sub-deacon.

The church was banked with flowers, and their odor mingled with the solemn tones of the organ to roll through the open doors where the reverent throng stood outside.

Emerging from the church, Mrs. Troy became faint and swayed backward, to be caught by her brother, Charles Miller, brother-in-law, Officer Thomas Troy of Division 2. She revived immediately and insisted on continuing to the cemetery.

The pallbearers were all patrolmen attached to the same division as Officer Troy, Division 6, and were: Frank Jolley, Thomas J. Sullivan, Walter Tyldesley, Thomas Kujawa, John Joyce and Horace Thibault.

After the services the police detail escorted the cortege a short distance through the streets of East Boston, on its way to the cemetery, and the men then scattered to their various stations.

While Troy was being laid to rest, Dist.-Atty. William J. Foley and the police were pressing preparation of their case against James Threadgill, charged with the policeman's murder.

HUNT FOR TAXI DRIVER

To combat the alibi which Threadgill has offered, Superintendent of Police Crowley has issued sweeping orders to the police to find a taxi driver believed to have driven the alleged slayer from Dilworth st., where the shooting occurred, to Batavia st., in the Back Bay.

It was in a Batavia st. apartment, with a gun in his possession, which police say was the murder weapon, that Threadgill was arrested by Superintendent Crowley and a detail of officers.

While awaiting the report of Capt. Charles Van Ambergh, who is comparing the murder bullet with the weapon taken from Threadgill, police are striving to place the prisoner at the scene of the murder.

Mrs. Nora Gordon of South Easton, who said she saw Threadgill with a gun before the shooting of Officer Troy and heard him threaten to shoot his way out if the police went after him, is being held as a material witness. She was released under $500 bonds in the custody of probation officers because she is the mother of a sickly baby.

STREETS ARE LINED

Hundreds of persons lined the streets near the church when the funeral cortege left for Holy Cross Cemetery, Malden. Patrolmen Troy's widow was accompanied to the grave in an automobile by Mrs Nellie, Troy, mother of the dead officer, and her own mother, Mrs. Nellie Miller. Mrs. Claire Harrington and Mrs. Helen Nagle, sisters of the dead officer, and Patrolman Thomas Troy, a brother, also accompanied the widow.

The widow was constantly attended by Dr. Mitchell Sisson, who said she bore up remarkably well, considering the fact she is about to become a mother again and also because of the nervous strain she was under. Mrs. Troy, mother of the dead officer, showed intense emotion at the grave. Both wife and mother were supported by relatives during the brief service at the grave, who frequently used smelling salts. The services at the grave were conducted by Rev. Fr. P. J. Welch of St. Joseph's Church, Malden.

DEFI HURLED AT DRY LAW FOES BY WOMEN

W. C. T. U., at Victory Luncheon, Challenge Liberals to Prove Law Fails

A challenge to those opposed to prohibition to prove their charges of failure of the 18th Amendment was issued today by the Massachusetts W. C. T. U. at its "victory luncheon" at the Hotel Brunswick.

Mrs. Ellen A. Gleason, honorary president, issued the defi in the presence of James M. Doran, U. S. Prohibition Commissioner. The challenge was enthusiastically applauded by several hundred men and women.

Mrs. Gleason said the "antis" were in error in charging that prohibition had brought about "bootlegging, bribery, smuggling, home brew, and drinking among our young people." She said these evils existed before prohibition.

Another feature of the meeting was a warning by Commissioner Doran that the repeal of the Massachusetts "Baby Volstead" act would "seriously cripple" the national enforcement plan.

NOT TRYING TO DICTATE

The federal prohibition commissioner explained that he did not undertake to advise Massachusetts people how to vote, but that he hoped for defeat of the repeal movement.

Other speakers included Mrs. Alice G. Ropes, president of the State W. C. T. U.; Mrs. Julian Coolidge of Cambridge, wife of the Harvard professor, who resigned from the Watch and Ward Society; James Eagen, master of the Harvard school in Charlestown; Mrs. James Eagen, Dr. A. Z. Conrad, pastor of the Park St. Church, and Esther M. Andrews of the Governor's Council.

A political note was injected when Mrs. Gleason read a letter from Mrs. William Tilton of Cambridge, mentioned as a possible U. S. senatorial candidate on a dry platform.

The letter was, in part, as follows:

"I wish to say, in regard to your urging me to run for the United States Senate in case no candidate appears whom we can support, that it is incredible that the Old Bay State has drifted so far from its state status in the Union as not to be able to find a candidate who will run in the Republican ranks on a 'Stand by Hoover' platform and in the Democratic ranks on a 'Stand by Women and Children and Fight the Return of the Saloon' platform."

SPEAKS ON LOCAL OPTION

Commissioner Doran said:

"Any effective and equitable national prohibition policy that attempts to relate the method or manner of the handling of the traffic in alcoholic liquors, as in effect prior to the World War, to the present situation, ignores the one fundamental basic fact of tremendous change in application of power to industry that has taken place in that period of time.

"If the United States were back 25 years a great deal might be said with reference to the desirability of local option inasmuch as one community and state was not so intimately dependent and related to other communities and states as at present."

LOBBYIST WAS SCARED OUT

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—Frank Boal, newspaper man, testified today before the Senate lobby committee that he had arranged an interview with E. R. Pickrell of the General Dyestuff Corp., in the office of Senator King, Democrat, Utah.

Pickrell previously had denied before the committee reports that he had used King's office as headquarters during consideration of the tariff bill, but said he had written a few letters in the office and had made a long-distance telephone call.

Boal added, however, that when he went to King's office to keep the appointment Pickrell was not there. He said he was informed Pickrell had been called suddenly to his New York office.

"You didn't find him, did you?" Senator Blaine (Rep.) of Wisconsin, asked.

"No, sir," Boal said.

"So you must have scared him out," Blaine continued.

Boal said he wanted to ask Pickrell, "Why he made Senator King's office his headquarters."

"You didn't frighten him, did you?" Blaine asked.

"I don't know what I did," Boal said. "He left town."

1307 Hub Students Earn $41,000 as Store Salesmen

More than $41,000 was earned by 1307 students of salesmanship in the Boston high schools, working in stores during the month of December, the School Committee reported today.

The students were given practical business experience as a part of the plan carried out by the school department co-operating with the Retail Trade Board.

About 800 of these students were employed in large department stores. The remainder worked in small specialty shops, chain stores, and suburban food and general stores.

EIGHT RESCUED IN BLAZE AT LAWRENCE

Lawrence, Jan. 16—Eight persons, including five small children in one family, were rescued from death by fire and smoke early today by two young men when a general alarm fire swept through a three-tenement dwelling house at 375 Elm st.

The first alarm in the neighborhood was shouted through the streets by Philip Shadalla of 392 Elm st., who heard the children's cries from the top floor of the house, and who caught the reflection of the leaping flames through the windows.

Edward Skeirik of 294 Oak st., and James Hassey of 276 Hampshire st. heard the alarm cry and rushed into the smoke-filled building.

Daring terrific heat, the darkness of the corridors, and the choking smoke, the young men made their way to the top floor and managed to awaken Mr. and Mrs. Adellah Hassan, the occupants, by beating on the door.

The oldest of the five Hassan children, Abdo, eight, was taken from his bed and put out on the rear porch of the house from which he was able to crawl over to the porch of the adjoining tenement house.

Mrs. Hassan wrapped a blanket over the head and face of her youngest child, Hasiba, nine months old, and was assisted down the front stairs to safety.

Hassan carried his four-year-old daughter, Ida, to safety after he had waited to see the two rescuers, Hassey and Skeirik, safely started along the smoke-filled corridor with George, three years old, and his six-year-old daughter, Emily.

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—The American business man's 1929 bill for bad check losses totaled $300,000,000 Secretary Guy H. Hulse of the National Retail Credit Association said today. The "good old charge account," he said, was the best preventive.

GILDA GRAY TO STAY 'HAPPY AND FREE'

New York, Jan. 16 (INS)—"I am so happy that I am free."

Gilda Gray, Venus of vibrations, thus received the news today that her divorce had become final from Gil Boag, former night club owner and theatrical producer.

The decree was granted in Waukesha, Wis.

The immigrant dancing girl, who taught the world to shimmy, spiked the report that she was to marry T. Frank Stewart, retired millionaire broker.

"We are just good friends," she declared. "It is a beautiful friendship, far truer and finer than the thing Broadway knows as love."

Would she ever marry again?

"Never," said Gilda. "From now on I am only an artist—never again a wife."

The occasion celebrated the second divorce obtained by the dancer.

She was divorced from her first husband, John Daniel Gorelcki, a bartender, in 1923.

"Do you ever expect to see Gil Boag?" she was asked.

"I hope not," she replied vehemently.

She said that she was resting after an arduous vaudeville tour and planned to go to Hollywood to do a talking picture in a few months.

"I have been working hard since 1919 and am now doing the things I always wanted to do," she said. "I am swimming, golfing and playing tennis."

2 Liquor Runners Fined $300 Each

Providence, Jan. 16—Charged with having transported liquor, which offense now is punishable under the Jones "5-and-10" act, three men who gave their names as Abraham Joseph, Abraham Roth and Alexander Finger, all of New York, today were fined $300 each by U. S. District Judge Letts here.

Mme. Jeritza Hides Her Tears in Song

New York, Jan. 16 (INS)—Maria Jeritza, Viennese soprano, looked charming and sang delightfully, laughing and "putting her whole soul" into the performance of Strauss' light opera, "Der Rosenkavalier."

The audience at the Metropolitan Opera House laughed with the diva and many exclaimed:

"She was wonderful; she really seemed to enjoy the comedy in the third act."

But today they found it was only good acting, for just before the overture last night Jeritza received a cablegram from Czechoslovakia announcing the death of her favorite brother.

After she had taken 12 curtain calls, exhibiting a fixed smile, the diva almost collapsed and wept in her dressing room as she hastily changed to street clothes.

MAN HUNT ON IN BROCKTON

Brockton, Jan. 16—Brockton police inspectors are seeking a well known young man, who accosted a 14-year-old girl in Legion parkway, while she was on her way home from school, placed her in a taxi against her will and carried her about three miles to a wooded section of the West End.

The girl was then forced to walk home, where she collapsed. After she had recovered, she told the story, and her parents called in the police.

The inspectors got a good description and traced the identity of the assailant. The city physician and private physician were called in and verified the girl's story. A tip to the police today divulged the supposed hiding place of the suspect.

Battle Three Days to Reach Lighthouse

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 16 (AP)—For three days, heavy surf and the inhospitable rocks of White Island of the Isles of Shoals group, repulsed the efforts of the commander of the lighthouse tender Hibiscus to take off James Freeman, first assistant keeper of the White Island lighthouse. Today the seas moderated and the transfer was successfully accomplished.

Freeman is being transferred to the light at Petit Manan off the Maine coast.

COLLEGE BOARD GETS CARNEGIE SPORT REPORT

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—Already approved by its commission on athletics, the famous Carnegie report on college athletics today was before the Association of American Colleges in its final session.

The commission in its report to the association said that the Carnegie report dealt "only moderately" with the situation and gave a conservative view of the state of college athletics.

It also asserted that the Carnegie report had placed before the college three questions:

Whether college athletics should be on an amateur basis; whether they should represent wholesome sport between colleges or whether they should be subsidized or semi-professional.

Each college was urged to make a thorough survey in view of the findings in the "Carnegie expose," on conditions in college athletics.

The Carnegie report, which caused a furore in educational circles, named many colleges as directly or indirectly subsidizing athletes.

When a Child is FEVERISH, CROSS, UPSET

Colic, gas, sour belching, frequent vomiting, feverish, in babies and children, generally show food is souring in the little digestive tract.

When these symptoms appear, give Baby a teaspoonful of Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Add it to the first bottle of food in the morning. Older children should be given a tablespoonful in a glass of water. This will comfort the child—make his stomach and bowels easy. In five minutes he is comfortable, happy. It will sweep the bowels free of all sour, indigestible food. It opens the bowels in constipation, colds, children's ailments. Children take it readily because it is palatable, pleasant-tasting.

Learn its many uses for mother and child. Write for the interesting book, "Useful Information." Address The Phillips Co., 117 Hudson St., New York, N. Y. It will be sent FREE.

In buying, be sure to get genuine Phillips Milk of Magnesia. Doctors have prescribed it for over 50 years.

AVOID THAT FUTURE SHADOW*

By refraining from over-indulgence

You men who would keep trim and fit ... you women who covet the tantalizing curves of the truly modern figure—when tempted to do yourself too well, light a Lucky instead. Be moderate—be moderate in all things, even in smoking. Eat healthfully but not immoderately. When your eyes are bigger than your stomach, light a Lucky instead. Coming events cast their shadows before. Avoid that future shadow by avoiding over-indulgence, if you would maintain that lithe, youthful figure.

Lucky Strike, the finest Cigarette you ever smoked, made of the finest tobacco—The Cream of the Crop—"IT'S TOASTED." Everyone knows that heat purifies and so "TOASTING" not only removes impurities but adds to the flavor and improves the taste.

"It's toasted"

*Be Moderate! ... Don't jeopardize the modern form by drastic diets, harmful reducing girdles, fake reducing tablets or other quack "anti-fat" remedies condemned by the Medical profession! Millions of dollars each year are wasted on these ridiculous and dangerous nostrums. Be Sensible! Be Moderate! We do not represent that smoking Lucky Strike Cigarettes will bring modern figures or cause the reduction of flesh. We do declare that when tempted to do yourself too well, if you will "Reach for a Lucky" instead, you will thus avoid over-indulgence in things that cause excess weight and, by avoiding over-indulgence, maintain a modern, graceful form.

Letters From Readers

Thinks Younger Generation of Today Is Superior

Editor Boston American:

The older folks of today seem to have only two topics of interest to discuss—the reckless, thoughtless, and immoral younger generation—and the prohibition problem. You will note that I am mentioning the two together. Well, that is just the way that they are usually discussed, together.

First, I say that this generation is no worse than any other. Second, I say it is far superior. And third, I say that to the average young man or woman of today the word "gin" is something that Eli Whitney invented for the cotton industry, not poison to swallow.

I have in mind a young organization, the Junior Free Loan Association of Roxbury, composed of boys and girls over 18. This club, only in existence three years, has already donated large sums to charity.

These young men and women devote their entire time, outside of work or college, to this charitable cause with no thought of reward. And having no time left, they do not find time to think of drinking, even if they wanted to. This is just an average group in a typical generation—a younger and finer generation. I. W.

Disagrees With Savant on Smoke Nuisance

Editor Boston American:

I entirely disagree with Prof. Drinker of Harvard University about the effects of smoke in a city.

Occasionally these professors sit down and study a matter like this without any practical information, such as the effects of smoke upon residents of houses along the line of railroads. Prof. Drinker could not have been familiar with conditions on Beacon Hill and other places. Neither has he lived in a district where huge chimneys are pouring out smoke, deep black clouds of it. If he will spend six months in such a locality he will change his views on the smoke nuisance.

No man can judge smoke from a swivel chair in a study. Get out and breathe it for six months or longer. This is the way to get information. J. T. M.

Sees Travesty in Airplane Baptism

Editor Boston American:

That incident of baptizing an infant, son of an air line ticket seller, while flying in an airplane is making a travesty of baptism. It is on a par with being married in the lion's cage. When will people use religious rites in a religious way? Why drag them down to their own common level of thinking when they are placed in this earth to be regarded as solemn and spiritual events.

If you want to name an infant in the air, don't call it a baptism, call it a flight of the imagination. If you want to be married in the lion's cage call it the privilege of being lionized. I saw something in your Letters to the Editor about this before on another use of baptism which I endorsed heartily.

Matrimony Gets Boost at Last

Editor Boston American:

Some of these old nabobs who hang around clubs in Boston and discourse on marriage as a handicap, with five-cent cigars in their mouths, should at least be open to reason.

So I am going to give them one. I hope that they glue their eyes here and listen to me about marriage.

Marriage steadies a man. Then life intended a man to have a mate. That can't be argued about. The Bible in creation of mankind makes a great point here. Marriage gives a man a sense of responsibility. Many men would be failures were it not for the advice and direction of wives. I know several such cases.

Then again, a man who will not succeed with a helpful, careful wife, will not succeed anywhere. Yes! marry young. If you have to struggle a few years or more make the best of the struggle. No man was ever made in spending his time in a clubhouse, talking of marriage as a handicap. J. F. L.

Daniel Webster Certainly Was a Smart Pupil

Editor Boston American:

A speaker, before the ministers in Chipman Hall, gave some of the details of the life of Daniel Webster who, because he was not a saint, was not by any means deserving of some criticism heaped upon him.

This story was told: When Webster was a small boy, his outward appearance was slovenly. He was untidy and occasionally appeared in school with dirty hands. The teacher warned him. He did appear again with dirty hands. The teacher summoned him for a whipping.

"Hold your hand, Daniel."

Daniel spat on the palm of his hand, rubbed it on the seat of his trousers and held it out.

The teacher was disgusted with his act. "Daniel," she said, "if you can find me another hand dirtier than yours in this school, I will let you off."

Daniel promptly held out the other hand and the teacher had to keep her word.

Russians Insist on Retaining Beards

Editor Boston American:

You can't get the best of those Soviets in Russia who cling to a beard, according to Albert R. Williams, now in that country. Williams used to be in charge of the Maverick Congregational Church, East Boston. The Russians will not shave. They squirm when they see any kind of a razor.

Beards they will have. They would feel chilly without them. The young are just the same. They want beards and winding mustaches. It is hoped that when the Soviet is recognized by the United States that they will also see how much better our young men look with a clean shave, and talcum powder to boot, rather than a brushy face. M. T. I.

Some Observations on Highway Safety

Editor Boston American:

Auto accidents are multiplying every week. Some time ago, I wrote about this in your letter department and received two answers.

I have been looking up records since then and find that San Diego, Calif., is the safest city in the United States, with only three accidents to 10,000 population. Milwaukee and Boston come next with five accidents to 10,000 population. In my opinion speeding should be stopped on city streets and traffic officers should not encourage it by hurrying up auto drivers.

Crossing streets evenings is very dangerous for pedestrians. Parked automobiles in many places are dangerous. They hide coming autos on dark streets.

Sues His Friend for Wife's Alienation

Bridgeport, Ct., Jan. 16 (INS)—Society here was amazed today at news that Oliver G. Martin, a leading business man, had sued Arthur L. Clark, his supposed friend and business leader, for $200,000, charging alienation of his wife's affections.

Martin retained Arthur B. O'Keefe of New Haven to institute the suit which charges that in 1927 Clark stole the affections of Louise Joyce Martin, former Stamford society girl. The Martins were married at Stamford on December 26, 1921.

15,000,000 More Go to See "Talkies"

Hollywood, Jan. 16 (INS)—Talking pictures have increased attendance at the nation's movie theaters more than 15,000,000 weekly, Will H. Hays, "czar" of picturedom, said on his arrival here to inspect motion picture plants.

Bullets Trace Gang Slayer to Chicago

Chicago, Jan. 16 (INS)—A "striking similarity" between bullets fired in the St. Valentine's Day massacre here and those which killed Frankie Yale, New York gang leader, was announced today as Col. Calvin Goddard, ballistics expert, prepared to examine the pellets more thoroughly.

Two New York detectives, Barry Butts and Stanley F. Gorman, brought the Yale death slugs from New York to be compared with those that killed seven "Bugs" Moran gangsters here and bullets fired from the machine guns captured in the bungalow-arsenal of Fred Burke, wanted here for 12 murders.

SENATORS GIVE WET-DRY VIEWS ON PROHIBITION

(Today ends the first ten years of national prohibition under the Eighteenth Amendment. The wets say it can never be enforced; the drys say it must be enforced. In the accompanying articles Senator Blaine, a prominent wet, suggests repeal of the prohibition amendment, and Senator Harris, a dry, proposes stricter enforcement. Their interesting views follow.)

By SENATOR JOHN J. BLAINE
(Written Exclusively for International News Service)
(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service)

Washington, Jan. 15—Today, January 16th, is the 10th anniversary of the prohibition regime. We have had 10 years' trial of the "noble experiment" and it has failed to bring temperance to the American people.

I propose, on this anniversary of prohibition, a constitutional amendment for the repeal of the 18th Amendment. Repeal of the amendment, in my opinion, is the best cure for the evils of prohibition.

To liberalize the Volstead Act would help re-establish moderation and temperance; but the ultimate solution of the curse of prohibition will be the abandonment of prohibition.

As I recall, in the last 20 years 15 countries, including foreign provinces, undertook prohibition. Of that number, the prohibition experiment prevails in only three, namely, the United States, Finland and Prince Edward Island.

Each country and sovereign province that has abandoned prohibition experimented about 10 years. It was found the evils of prohibition could be cured only by discarding prohibition.

America may well profit by their example.

By SENATOR WM. J. HARRIS
(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service.)

Washington, Jan. 15—In these 10 years the prohibition law has never been given a fair trial and Congress has never appropriated sufficient money to make it a success. Its enemies have claimed the law was a complete failure and tried to make this and other laws unpopular.

It is the height of folly to try to enforce this law with the meager appropriation in the past with the thousands of miles of boundary lines as Mexico and Canada, as well as of our seacoast on the Pacific and Atlantic, to say nothing of the enforcement in 2500 counties and several thousand towns in the United States. Congress certainly will appropriate any amount of money necessary to bring real enforcement.

The most important thing to be accomplished and which would give the greatest relief is to arrange for speedy trials and this could be accomplished by a bill which I introduced three years ago and again during the present session, which would allow anyone charged with violation of the law with his consent to be taken immediately before a United States commissioner and have the case against him tried. Nine out of ten times they would plead guilty when tried immediately.

End Eczema Tortures Forever

No Need to Suffer Another Day

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to stop the itching and torture of Eczema instantly, and that is to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning, and people who suffer from any embarrassing or disfiguring skin trouble would be wise to banish it before it reaches a more or less chronic stage.

Ask any first-class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such highly concentrated preparation that two ounces last a long time, and furthermore, if this wonderful discovery does not give you complete satisfaction you can have your money refunded.

Special note: People who want to reduce swollen or varicose veins should get a bottle of Emerald Oil at once. By applying night and morning as directed they will quickly notice an improvement which will continue until the veins and bunches are reduced to normal.

DORAN AGAINST BOTH WET AND DRY 'FANATICS'

"I have no sympathy with fanatical dryes, nor with the extreme wets. prohibition is an economic problem, and not a religious or moral issue as I have frequently explained to the churches."

This comment was made today by U. S. Prohibition Commr. J. M. Doran of Washington, at the office of Commr. Lewis at the federal prohibition headquarters. Commr. Doran was in Boston to address the W. C. T. U. "dry jubilee" meeting at the Brunswick hotel.

Commr. Doran held a press conference at the suggestion of Commr. Lewis. The Washington official is a short, thin, red-headed man of middle age, restless and with a sense of humor.

Asked if he considered prohibition a "noble experiment," Commissioner Doran laughed heartily.

Referring to the oft-quoted expression of President Hoover, Mr. Doran said:

"As a matter of fact the President actually said that it is an experiment noble in purpose, but people have shortened that expression."

Other than this comment he would not discuss the President's words.

He declined to comment upon the Coast Guard killings on the Black Duck rum-runner, saying that the matter was not under his department.

Asked about his opinion of the success or failure of prohibition, he replied:

"It has had a very fair measure of success."

Commissioner Doran was told that speakers at the State House hearing on the Carroll case had quoted Doran as saying that large cities, and Boston in particular, gave federal prohibition officers no help.

"What I said was that large cities did not help us and that Boston was no exception," explained the commissioner.

"I have a very high opinion of Police Commissioner Wilson," volunteered the Washington head. "He always co-operates with our men."

When told that certain Boston "wets" planned to drape the American flag at half-mast because of their belief in the "death of liberty," Mr. Doran said:

"That's a silly idea."

SON 'KIDNAPED' BY LUCKENBACH

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Lewis L. Luckenbach, wife of the vice-president of the Luckenbach Steamship Lines, today filed in Supreme Court papers in which she charged her husband has fled to Florida with his 9-year-old son, Lewis, Jr., known as "Chubby," and with Stella Louise Stone, named in Mrs. Luckenbach's suit for divorce.

He left, she said, to avoid arrest under an order signed by Supreme Court Justice Richard H. Mitchell on Dec. 23.

Mrs. Luckenbach states in an affidavit that her husband, his son, and Miss Stone are now living on Florida on his island estate known as "C. M. P. Luckenbach," and that he will probably leave shortly for California and Hawaii.

Mrs. Luckenbach is a daughter of C. Hilmer Lundbeck, director general of the Swedish-American Steamship Company.

Japanese Hostility in Doheny Defense

Washington, Jan. 16 (INS)—Fear of Japanese hostility, real or fancied, on the part of American naval experts and observers, will be the defense of Edward L. Doheny when he goes to trial here March 10, on a charge of having bribed Albert B. Fall in connection with the Elk Hills naval oil lease it appeared today.

Justice William Hitz, in the District Supreme Court, has issued an order directing the Navy Department to produce the famous "Gleaves report," submitted in 1921 by Admiral Gleaves, and said to contain secret data in regard to the hostility of Japan.

Hub Tern Flies 9000 Miles in 59 Days

A flight of 9000 miles in 59 days by a common tern, the longest official bird flight on record, was reported today at the joint meeting of the Northwestern Bird Banding Association and the Federation of Bird Clubs of New England at the University Club.

The tern, banded by Oliver H. Austin of Cambridge on July 14, flew from that city to an African port in the Indian ocean, arriving there the following Sept. 13, averaging more than 150 miles a day.

The bird appeared none the worse for its remarkable flight, according to the report, and after being fed was again released.

Massachusetts has 44 bird banding stations, several of which are in the vicinity of Boston.

Among the most active bird banders was Mrs. Horace Dunham of Wellesley, who had banded 1147 birds from a second-story window shelf since May, 1926. These included 95 gold finches, 106 purple finches, 27 rose-breasted grosbeaks, 53 pine siskins and 77 tree sparrows in the 17 species trapped and banded.

Another woman, Mrs. Morris Morgan, induced a dozen humming birds to enter her hotel room in Southeast Harbor, Me., by putting out a glass of sweetened water and bright artificial flowers near her window.

Three bird banders in a triangle two miles apart captured a total of 2000 birds in three years without any one of the three ever getting the same bird, showing how birds return to the exact spot year after year.

Officers elected to the bird banders association were Mrs. Horace Dunham, president; Dr. John May, secretary, and Richard Harding, treasurer.

Fliers Make 500 Miles in 11 Days

Nome, Alaska, Jan. 16 (AP)—Capt. Pat Reid, Canadian flier and two companions were in Nome today after having spent 11 days in flying here from Fairbanks, a distance of about 500 miles. A forced landing that damaged their plane delayed them.

Reid and his colleagues, William Hughes and Jim Hutchinson, expect to participate in the search for Carl Ben Eielson and Earl Borland, who have been lost since Nov. 9, as soon as their cabin plane can be put into shape.

Seek Missing Mail Plane in Nevada

Las Vegas, Nev., Jan. 16 (INS)—Eight planes, one with radio equipment, prepared to leave here today for a region 15 miles west of Pioche, Nev., to seek Maury Graham's wrecked airmail plane.

Graham, veteran flier of the Western Air Express, has been missing since last Friday night when he left here for Salt Lake City.

SIX PERISH AS COLD BLASTS SWEEP WEST

Denver, Col., Jan. 16 (AP)—The Rocky Mountain West still shivered today under the sting of the most protracted cold wave since 1924. Six deaths were caused indirectly by the bitter cold.

Temperatures, well below the freezing mark in Denver for nine days, ventured to new low levels, climaxing the performance with a minimum of 7 below zero early today.

Throughout Montana, Wyoming, Colorado, New Mexico and Kansas the cold held tenaciously.

Five Indians, all members of the same family, perished when fire destroyed their log cabin on the Crow reservation south of Billings, Mont. It was believed the fire was caused by an overheated stove.

At Pueblo, Col., Mrs. Abram C. Hall died from a fractured skull incurred when she was struck by a skidding automobile.

Freezing Weather Halts Floods Along Mississippi

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—The central Mississippi valley was the land of freezing waters today.

Near-zero temperatures, settling over the broad valley, choked rivers into vast rough mirrors of ice and slush and made misery more rampant among those driven from their homes in the flooded regions.

Unseasonal mildness filled the valleys of Mississippi tributaries with melting snows; rivers ran wild beyond flood stages, but the freeze today halted a furtherance.

Along the song-praised Wabash in Indiana condition equalled those of 1913—still recalled as the year of flood disaster.

In historic Vincennes more than 500 families were driven from their homes. At Terre Haute the situation was similar. At Clinton high water closed coal mines and cut off hundreds of families with the closing of roads.

In Indiana National Guardsmen were called out to help save the White river bridge at Hazelton.

School Bars Girl With 'Bad Parents'

Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP)—Business ethics of parents must meet the standards of the Highland Manor School, a private school for girls, before their daughters will be accepted as pupils.

Dr. Eugene H. Lehman announced to an assembly of the 10 students that one girl had been refused admittance because her parents were engaged in improper business practices. He said later the couple were wealthy and of some prominence. They are in some legitimate business which he did not explain other than it was not bootlegging.

He believes it is the duty of schools to raise the business and social ethics of parents.

GERMAN CITIES GUARDED; HUNT RIOT LEADERS

Berlin, Jan. 16 (INS)—Vigorous measures were taken by the German Government today to apprehend the leaders of the Communist riots in various parts of the country which resulted in a list of five dead and scores wounded.

The cities and towns which were chiefly affected by the disturbances were turned into virtual armed camps, with heavily armed police patrolling the streets to prevent any further outbreaks. The riots are believed to have been an attempt by Communist factions to overthrow the Government.

The riots were swelled to dangerous proportions by malcontents among German unemployed, who now total approximately 1,500,000 persons.

The belief that a revolutionary plot may have been behind the riots arose from the fact that the outbreaks occurred simultaneously in such widely separated areas as Chemnitz, Worms, Madgeburg and Berlin. In all these cities police guards have been doubled and all public buildings heavily patroled.

Berlin was in a state approaching martial law today, with police stationed at every corner, and every attempt by Communists to stage meetings broken up with police using their truncheons freely and occasionally firing rifle volleys into the air.

Jule Powell Gets Divorce From Actor

Los Angeles, Jan. 16 (INS)—Mrs. Jule Powell today held a decree granting her a divorce from William Powell, former stage star and now a film actor.

Powell's wife obtained the divorce action on charges of cruelty. The decree was granted late yesterday.

Boy, Nine, Shoots His 3-Year-Old Sister

Worcester, Jan. 16—Accidentally shot by her six-year-old brother, Ralph, Ruby Currier, three years old, is dying in Worcester City Hospital from gunshot wounds in the abdomen.

Ralph and the girl are children of Mr. and Mrs. Henry L. Currier, Jr., of W. Boylston st. The father had gone to work and the mother was taking a nap, her first knowledge of the accident having been the report of the gun.

The father, a machinist, told police that the gun was standing unloaded in a closet and that shells were on a high shelf. He said he had used it Saturday, but cleaned it Sunday, making sure the two barrels of the 12-gauge gun were empty.

Detectives investigating the case are inclined to doubt that a six-year-old youngster could break down and load such a heavy weapon. They will question the child.

The mother found the baby unconscious on the floor and called her husband, who took Ruby to the hospital where authorities said she probably will not recover.

Mrs. Kate Meyrick Will Be Freed Soon

London, Jan. 16 (AP)—Mrs. Kate Meyrick, London night club proprietress whose two daughters are married to peers, probably will be released from the prison to which she was sentenced January 28, 1929.

Her sentence entailed hard labor and followed a trial and conviction on charges of corrupting the police. She earned three months' remission for good behavior. Three months ago she entered the prison hospital.

John D. Jr. to Build $100,000 School

Tarrytown, N. Y., Jan. 16 (AP)—The ten-year effort of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., to obtain consolidation of the Pocantico Hills, East View and Sleepy Hollow school districts ended with victory. The boards of the three districts, at a joint meeting, voted to form the Pocantico Hills consolidated high school district.

Rockefeller will pay half the cost of a new school, costing $100,000 to $150,000. The Rockefeller estate is at Pocantico Hills.

Adults, too, prefer "NO DOSING" for COLDS

Ever since Vicks VapoRub originated the better method of treating colds "without dosing," it has been used largely by mothers of young children, because there's nothing to swallow, and, of course, nothing to upset the little ones' delicate stomachs.

Each year more and more adults, too, have found Vicks equally good for their own colds. Just rubbed on, it acts through the skin like a plaster, and at the same time, releases medicated vapors, which are breathed in direct to the inflamed air-passages.

Ever-increasing demand for this better method of treating colds is shown in the figures of the famous Vick slogan. First announced when Vicks reached "17 Million Jars Used Yearly"—later raised to "21 Million"—there are now "Over 26 Million Jars Used Yearly."

Jailed Mother Dying in Dry Raid Terror

By WINIFRED BLACK
Universal Service

Salinas, Cal., Jan. 16—Little Mrs. Arthur Brown isn't in prison in Salinas any more. She isn't at home with her little children in their comfy little farm house at the Gladiola Farms out on the Castro-Villa rd., either.

She is in the hospital and the baby she had begun to make happy plans for is dead.

I saw her for two or three minutes in the hospital.

The nurses didn't want to let me in and when I went in finally I didn't want to stay and perplex the poor little thing with any more questions—not just yet.

She's a little bit of a thing—Sue Brown, and she was as white as bleaching bone when mI saw her, lying there like a pitiful little helpless child—alone, except for the nurse, making the bitter fight that every baby wife must make some day.

She has a little wistful child's face, with big frightened, puzzled brown eyes that seem to be asking a sort of confused question all the time.

AFRAID OF PRISON

"They brought me over from prison an hour or so ago," said little Sue Brown, "I was afraid to stay there any longer—I haven't been very well for two or three weeks—and all the excitement—I just couldn't bear it, I guess."

The big brown eyes flooded with sudden tears.

"Have you seen Art?" she said. "Does he know where I am? I'm so worried about Arty and Katherine Bell, my two little children. The girl that's staying with them now has to go home. I hope my mother will get here. But I don't know.

"Poor Art, he has to keep working—whatever happens. They've been awfully good to him at the shop, but he's got to keep up his work. I don't see how he does it.

"I don't see why they won't let me go home—I'm sort of afraid here all alone. They're good to me, awfully good. The nurses and doctor, but I'd like to see little Arty and little baby. You know how it is. I sort of miss them, and maybe if anything should happen they'd wish they'd had a chance to say—"

The wistful little face whitened with sudden pain. The nurse stepped forward—and I went out to let the little frightened woman with the big brown eyes fight what may be a losing battle for life, youth and love—and somehow it all seemed a grizzly, cruel farce.

ART EXPLAINS

I found Arthur Brown, Sue Brown's husband, right where he is every day of his life—at work in the little machine shop in Monterey.

He wiped his sinewy hands on a piece of waste and came and talked to us very quietly about the whole strange business.

"It all began New Year's Eve," he said, "Sue and I were invited to a party in Monterey, but Sue didn't feel very well, so she said she'd stay at home with the children and I could run over for an hour or so and tell the folks she was sorry she couldn't come.

I drove out of the yard about 8:45, and on my way down the road I passed a machine not 10 minutes from my gate.

"I went to the party and started home about 10:30.

"When I got home I found Sue crying. She was shaking from head to foot, and she seemed very much frightened. I asked what was the matter and she told me that just after I had gone, and just as she was getting into bed, somebody pounded on the front door.

THOUGHT JOKE

"She put her head out of the window and called down 'Who is it?' and a man answered in a rough loud voice, 'It's the sheriff.'

"Sue thought it was somebody kidding her—one of our friends—so she called out 'all right, sheriff, I'll be right down.'

"She threw on her bathrobe and house shoes as fast as she could, but before she could get to the head of the stairs the man broke in the door.

"She was all alone in the house with two small children, one six years old and one a year old, and the man breaking the door down and coming right in that way scared her so she didn't know what to do. She wasn't well, anyway, you see.

"The man handed her a paper and said he'd come to search the house. Sue said, 'Why, of course. But who are you? Who sent you? Have you seen Art?'

"The man laughed and mumbled something about 'Not bothering with Art,' and he went all through the house from top to bottom. He looked in every nook and corner, and finally he found two cases of home brew.

"No, I didn't make it myself. A friend of mine made it. I bought half the materials and he bought half, and we thought we'd have a little beer for the holidays.

"The man grabbed the beer and asked my wife if she didn't have some whisky hid. My wife said 'No, we never had any whisky in the house, not that she knew of.' She tried to get the man to tell her who sent him there and why he seemed so mad about the home brew. She didn't see any harm in that.

"Sue is a little homebody. She just stays with the children and takes care of the plants. And she doesn't know anything about bootleggers or sheriffs or anything like that.

RUSHED TO CITY

"The man told her she'd hear from him in a day or so. About 10 minutes after he'd gone I came home. She was glad to see me. She cried and cried.

"We couldn't either of us make out what it was all about. We thought there must be some mistake and we never expected to hear from it again.

"It took Sue quite a few days to get over the scare and I couldn't bear to leave her alone a minute. Just as she was getting over it a little—eight days after that—the same man came back and he had a warrant for her arrest and he said he was in a great hurry and she'd have to go with him right then and there. It was five minutes of twelve when he got there and he said he'd have to be in court before 1 o'clock.

"Sue tried to get me on the telephone at the shop, but she couldn't get me and he wouldn't let her wait, and he wouldn't take her past the shop on the way to Monterey to tell me about it.

"Just as I was starting out of the shop on my way home to lunch—you see I'd got to going home for lunch since Sue got the scare—I wanted to see how she was—you understand we were expecting—

"And just as I was starting up the road I met my brother and he told me somebody had taken Sue to Monterey to court and the children were crying and nobody knew what to do.

SIGNED "CONFESSION"

"I turned right around and stepped on it to Monterey.

"I went as fast as I dared to go, but when I got there the trial was over and I had just time to see Sue for one minute before they took her to jail.

"Sue said the judge was in a hurry. He had to get out to lunch and somebody was waiting for him. And Laughrey, the man who arrested her, was in a hurry, too. He had to be in Salinas at a certain time. And Sue was so scared she didn't know her own name. And she thought they had arrested her for the home brew and she signed a paper saying, yes, she had the home brew in the house.

"But it turned out that the paper said she confessed to selling home brew and whiskey too. She didn't know a thing about it, and they never asked me one single word.

"They never called me to court and they never gave her a chance to call me."

ANOTHER STAUNCH BOOSTER FOR BON-TONE

"Before Taking Bon-Tone I Was Afraid to Sit Down to Eat"

Mr. Norbert Vachon of 97 Marcella St., Roxbury, Mass., is another staunch booster for Bon-Tone. He states, "I had been in very poor health for the past two or three years. My stomach was in a very bad condition and I underwent some terrible agony with it. Why, there were times that I actually was afraid to sit down to eat because of the distress I would get afterward. The food just would not digest but lie in my stomach and sour and ferment and it seemed as if there was a lump of iron in the pit of the stomach. Gas would form that kept me continually belching, and finally my appetite left me altogether. I was also bothered with dizzy spells and then I became in such a weakened condition that I hardly had a bit of strength. Constipation was another thing that gave me trouble and I was always taking laxatives of some kind. When a friend of mine who had received wonderful benefit with Bon-Tone suggested that I try it, I did. I have taken five bottles now, and am feeling great. I have a great appetite and can eat about anything I wish and no trouble after. I have not had a dizzy spell in months. I sleep fine and have gained eight pounds in weight. I am only too glad to tell others what this grand medicine did for me."

Mr. Norbert Vachon

Go to Epstein Drug Co., Inc., Scollay Square, Boston, and meet our representative. He will explain more about Bon-Tone to you.

For your convenience Bon-Tone is for sale in South Boston at John S. Austin's Drug Store, Perkins Square, and in Cambridge at the Cole Drug Co., 626 Mass. Ave., Central Square.

SCIENCE FINDS A NEW WAY TO MEASURE AIR

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—The cause of many magnetic disturbances may be ascertained by observations made possible through a new method of measuring more accurately the earth's ozone "blanket," a very thin coat of atmosphere believed to lie about thirty or more miles above us.

The astronomical observatory of the Smithsonian Institution under the direction of Dr. Charles G. Abbot, assisted by F. E. Fowle, in announcing today the new method said the ozone contents may be measured every day in which solar radiation observations are made at far flung stations of the department.

It would even be possible, by this method, Mr. Fowle said, to go back to the long series of observations made on Mount Wilson, in California, from 1905 to 1920, and determine from data there the ozone prevailing over that station during the period.

The improved method, based on old methods, has to do with the absorbing power of ozone in the yellow green spectrum. This thin blanket, an unstable form of oxygen which keeps us all from freezing to death by holding the earth's heat, slightly absorbs yellow light waves of the sun as they approach the earth.

Experiments conducted over a year's period from many angles of the sun enable the two scientists to determine accurately by means of the yellow light cut off from the earth the ozone's contents. The absorption, least when the sun was directly overhead, increased with the distance traveled by the light through the ozone canopy as the rays became slanting.

Moonshine Industry Well Modernized

Atlanta, Jan. 16 (AP)—After 10 years of prohibition, enforcement authorities say they find mountain moonshiners on the run—with improved running gear.

Gone is the old stone jug, hidden in the stump, long a trademark of the hill fraternity. A portable tin container, such as city bootleggers use, has usurped its place.

Changes have come to the entire "mountain dew" industry, if the north Georgia hills are an index, according to Howard P. Wright, deputy prohibition administrator here.

Firearms still flourish on many a hillside, but federal agents aren't targets any more, said Wright. The guns form the mountaineers' cooperative telegraph system to warn shiners that prohibition agents are guests of the countryside.

"In every moonshining district there's a lookout," Wright explained. "When he sees strangers who might be prohibition agents he runs out back of the shed and fires a gun in the air.

"The still operators nearby do the same and run. In a few minutes the alarm has spread through the whole district and every still is deserted.

"We seldom have any trouble, however, except to catch them on the run."

Stone furnace stills are disappearing from the hills and copper, easily moved, is getting the play, said Wright.

Home distilleries that several years ago ran as high as 250 to 300 gallons capacity have been junked for smaller, more mobile outfits of from 50 to 75 gallons capacity.

Even the automobile, stranger to mountain moonshining in pre-prohibition days, has changed.

The runners tried large cars at the outset, but now small cars are in vogue, with loads seldom more than 50 gallons.

SHOOTING TRIO WANTED FOR N. H. CRIMES

Phoenix, Ariz., Jan. 16 (AP)—Suspected of crimes in New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Ohio, Texas and Arizona, the woman and two men captured near here Tuesday after gun battles with police of two counties lined up today for further questioning.

Sheriff C. H. Wright announced he was convinced, through comparison of fingerprints, that the prisoners were Mrs. Irene Schroeder, Benwood, W. Va.; W. Glenn Dague and Vernon Ackerman, ex-convict of Oklahoma.

Charges of kidnapping with intent to rob, carrying a maximum penalty of life imprisonment, and assault with intent to commit murder have been filed against the trio.

Mrs. Schroeder and Dague are wanted by Pennsylvania authorities in connection with the slaying of State Policeman Brady Paul. Neither Mrs. Schroeder nor Dague would admit knowledge of "any crimes" in New Hampshire.

SUPPER DANCE TOMORROW NIGHT

TOMORROW NIGHT THE first of the greatly anticipated junior supper dances is to take place in the big ballroom of the Copley-Plaza. A number of smart dinner parties have been planned to precede it, the guests to go on to the supper dance at about 11, there to sit together at the same table. These affairs are attended by post debutantes and the younger married people. Mrs. Albert J. Beveridge is to be the hostess at a dinner at the Chilton Club in honor of her daughter, Miss Abbey Beveridge. About 50 covers will be laid in one of the club's private dining rooms. Mrs. Beveridge has invited to her party Miss Barbara Welch, Miss Edith Wolcott, Miss Agnes Boardman, Miss Rose Movius, Miss Elizabeth Scaife, the Misses Luisita and Margaret Leland, Miss Peggy Read, the Misses Minna and Florence Lindsay, Miss Rosamond Musgrave, Miss Nancy Olney, Miss Evelyn Royce, Miss Dorothea Frothingham, Miss Marguerite Swann, Miss Hester Codman and Miss Elizabeth Sherburne.

MISS SALLY PARKER, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Swinerton Parker, is entertaining at dinner at her home on Beacon st., Friday night. Miss Katharine Hamlin, Miss Harriet White, Miss Helen Seymour, Miss Eleanor Collier and Miss Eugenia Frothingham are to be among her guests. Later in the evening they, too, will wend their way to the junior supper dance. Others who are planning to entertain tomorrow night are of five readings is unfavorable and available for either course. Tickets for single readings are also obtainable.

LOCAL SOCIETY INTEREST centers around the International Skating Carnival which is to be held at the Boston Arena February 12 for the benefit of the Convalescent Home of the Children's Hospital, of which Mrs. George H. Monks is president, Miss Mary B. Lothrop is vice-president, Mrs. Horatio G. Curtis and Mrs. Henry S. Hunnewell are honorary vice-presidents, Mr. Samuel H. Hooper, treasurer, Mrs. I. McD. Garfield, assistant treasurer and Mrs. Robert Amory is secretary. The committee in charge includes managers of the Convalescent Home and officers and governors of the Boston Skating Club. The latter club's officers are Charles M. Rotch, president, Edward M. Howland, vice-president, Nathaniel W. Niles, secretary and treasurer, and M. L. Madden, Courtenay Crocker, James Lawrence, Richard L. Hapgood, and Frederick Goodridge, on the board of governors.

THE CARNIVAL COMMITTEE appointed by the Skating Club consists of Charles M. Rotch, Nathaniel W. Niles, Richard Hapgood, Frederick Goodridge, and Mrs. Charles B. Blanchard. From the Convalescent Home Mrs. George H. Monks is the general chairman, Mrs. Alexander Whiteside is chairman of the publicity committee, and Miss Anna W. Cutler is chairman of the ticket committee. George E. B. Hill is chairman of the music committee, Arthur M. Goodridge has charge of the Gypsy Quadrill of 32, Mrs. Edward M. Howland will train the 30 children and Mrs. Nathaniel W. Niles will assist with this part of the program also.

INVITATIONS HAVE BEEN received from Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Talbot Strickland and the season. She accompanied her parents to California early in November, returning home with them a day or so before Christmas. She was elected to membership in the Junior League with the early fall group. An older sister, Miss Jane Strickland, was presented to society during the winter of 1925-26.

FIVE FRENCH READINGS are to be given by Madame Roulet-Pavey, member of the Societe de Lecture et de Recitation de Paris, at 11:30 on Tuesday mornings, January 28, February 11, and 25, March 11 and 25, at the house of Mrs. Ellio Wadsworth on Marlborough st. The day following each of the aforementioned dates at the same hour, Madame Roulet Elise Eleanor Strickland is at "at home" on Saturday, February 8, from four until seven o'clock at the Brookline Country Club. There is to be dancing. Miss Strickland, although a member of this year's coterie of buds, has been away the greater part of Pavey will give a similar course at the home of Miss Grace Nichols of Chestnut st. Madame is also known as Mrs. Frank D. Pavey of Park ave., New York. The subscription for the course of five readings is unfavorable and available for either course. Tickets for single readings are also obtainable.

THE READINGS WILL BE selected from the following and other plays: "La Fugue," by Henri Duvernois; "Un Dejeuner d'Amoureux," by Andre Birabeau; "Les Precieuse de Geneve," by Robert de Flers and Francis de Croisset; "Topaz," by Marcel Pagnol; "La Rouille," a Russian play, French translation by M. Nouiere; "La Sexe-Faible," by Edouard Bourdet; "Le Dernier Tzar," by Maurice Rostand; "Le Voyageur," by Denys Amiel.

NEXT WEDNESDAY EVENING, January 22, Miss Virginia Warren, charming and talented soprano and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Warren of Everett ave., Winchester, is to give her first Boston concert. Miss Warren, after many years of vocal study, made her debut in Paris last year, where she was well received. She has also sung in London. This gifted singer is a graduate of the National Park Seminary in Washington, D. C., which is a school of high social standing. Miss Warren's engagement to N. Robert Vonshis of River Edge, N. J., was announced by her parents December 11. Her sister, Miss Herailia Warren, made her social bow in December.

MISS ELEANOR HOLTON of Beacon st. had as her guests at a dinner she gave in her home: Dr. and Mrs. Richard King, Dr. and Mrs. Benjamin Tenney, Jr. (Constance Vaillant), Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin A. G. Thorndike and her fiance, Dr. Reginald Smithwick.

AMONG THE BOSTONIANS at present stopping in New York are Mr. and Mrs. Laurelton Ward of Brookline, who are at the Savoy-Plaza. Mrs. Arthur T. Bradlee and Mrs. Thomas H. Sanman of Chestnut Hill are at the Madison. Mrs. Harold L. Chaffinoux, of Boston, who is at the St. Regis, will sail on the Ile de France tomorrow evening. Mrs. George H. Waterman, of Chestnut Hill, and Mrs. James W. Wheeler are among the arrivals at the St. Regis. Mrs. Paul D. Rust is also at that hotel. Mr. and Mrs. Frederick S. Whitwell of Boston are among the arrivals at the Berkshire.

Miss Olivia Churchill Mrs. Julian T. Leonard

Miss Olivia Churchill of Milton and Mrs. Julian T. Leonard of Brookline were among those watching a recent badminton tournament.

Dinner Planned in Mrs. Andrews' Honor

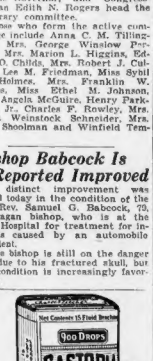
Friends and admirers of Esther M. Andrews of Brookline, member of the Governor's Council, the first woman to hold such an office, are arranging a dinner in her honor at Hotel Somerset next Tuesday evening. Mrs. Frank G. Allen, wife of the Governor, and Congresswoman Edith N. Rogers head the honorary committee.

Those who form the active committee include Anna C. M. Tillinghast, Mrs. George Winslow Perkins, Mrs. Marion L. Higgins, Edwin O. Childs, Mrs. Robert J. Cuthert, Lee M. Friedman, Miss Sybil H. Holmes, Mrs. Franklin W. Hobbs, Miss Ethel M. Johnson, Mrs. Angela McGuire, Henry Parkman, Jr., Charles F. Rowley, Mrs. Anna Weinstock Schneider, Mrs. Max Shoolman and Winfield Tempie.

Bishop Babcock Is Reported Improved

A distinct improvement was noted today in the condition of the Rt. Rev. Samuel G. Babcock, 70, suffragan bishop, who is at the City Hospital for treatment for injuries caused by an automobile accident.

The bishop is still on the danger list due to his fractured skull, but his condition is increasingly favorable.



When Babies CRY

Babies will cry, often for no apparent reason. You may not know what's wrong, but you can always give Castoria. This soon has your little one comforted; if not, you should call a doctor. Don't experiment with medicines intended for the stronger systems of adults! Most of those little upsets are soon soothed away by a little of this pleasant-tasting, gentle-acting children's remedy that children like.

It may be the stomach, or may be the little bowels. Or in the case of older children, a sluggish, constipated condition. Castoria is still the thing to give. It is almost certain to clear up any minor ailment, and could by no possibility do the youngest child the slightest harm. So it's the first thing to think of when a child has a coated tongue; won't play; can't sleep, is fretful or out of sorts. Get the genuine; it always has Chas. H. Fletcher's signature on the package.

PROGRESS OF JUNIOR CLUB MOVEMENT OUTLINED

AND the junior club movement continues to grow.

In the interest of this core of the club movement in the country today, representatives of the project and junior club advisors traveled from all over the state to attend the informal conference on junior membership arranged by the founder and "mother" of the movement, Mrs. Frank P. Bennett, Jr., at the state federation headquarters.

Plans to further attract the young girl, the girl of high school age, the girl of early teens, into adopting the schemes and interests and services of the club activities of their mothers were outlined and discussed by those who came to watch the possibilities of junior membership and recite the deeds well done by the young people.

Young girls want junior membership in women's clubs. Upon this fact the clubwomen all agreed. Rather, was the job made difficult by the mothers themselves who held to the idea that their daughters had sufficient to do with social and educational duties.

SERVICE "BIG THING"

The service which young girls can render the community and which in return builds up character was repeatedly stressed as the "big thing" in the junior movement.

"Make the girls realize responsibility. Teach them to be responsible and efficient. Interest them in the worth-while things of life. Let them learn to work and to play together harmoniously for it will lead them into new fields of activity," Mrs. Bennett declared.

That the young girl needs something substantial to make her routine necessary and important has been argued by those who have fought hard for junior membership in women's clubs.

"It is a training school for broader vision, higher ideals and tolerance of the viewpoint of others," Mrs. Bennett has held.

At the conference the following were present: Mrs. Charles L. Homer, Quincy; Mrs. Harris L. Davenport, Framingham; Miss Martha Elizabeth Chenery and Mrs. Percival G. Power of the Woman's Charity Club and Junior Club.

Mrs. Fred M. Blanchard, West Newton; Mrs. Martha S. Watson, East Boston; Mrs. George E. Gonley, Abington, second district director; Mrs. Stephen E. Wright, Auburndale; Mrs. William E. Morcross, Chatham.

Mrs. Edwin M. Wolley, West Newton; Mrs. Hazel Hammond Albutson, West Roxbury; Mrs. J. J. Rersell, Springfield; Mrs. B. Howard Lester, West Newton; Mrs. Melvin P. Morrill, Swampscott; Mrs. Albert E. Crocker, Ashland; Mrs. F. D. Bond, Newton Center; Mrs. R. B. Woodsum, Braintree; Alice Repetti, Roxbury; Catherine Albiani, Dorchester; Mrs. Joseph Selyveld, Rockland.

DESCRIBE PROGRAMS

Mrs. Bennett presided, calling upon the individual advisors for descriptions of the programs and activities of their juniors.

The Auburndale Junior membership, 12 years old, is the oldest in the state, and with a membership of 24 girls voted to send $25 to Mrs. Grace Morrison Poole, first vice-president of the General Federation, as their contribution to the $2,000,000 Foundation Fund.

A dollar for each member and one for the advisor, Mrs. Wright.

Since the contribution is wholly voluntary, and comes at a time when the Foundation Fund is a delicate subject of discussion, the Auburndale Juniors are to be congratulated, and more particularly their president, Janet Brown.

In this group, feeling is strong for club activities and the girls make it a special point to "carry on" as do their elders in club life.

Mrs. Norcross, speaking of her Chatham juniors, told of a wooden sign on the front of a clubhouse which informs the passing world that within the Chatham Junior Woman's Club resides and holds meetings and transacts business of extreme importance to the community. Three junior clubs exist in Mrs. Norcross' district.

A powerful junior organization is the Young Woman's Italian Club; so powerful in fact, as to have graduated in scope from a mere junior group to a club, specific in purpose and definite in activities. The Home for Italian Children is their philanthropic outlet and the girls give handsomely of their money. On February 6, the girls will hold their annual formal dance at the Hotel Kenmore, with May D'Angelo chairman, assisted by Evelyn Giardino, Alice Repetti, Louise Rotti and Catherine Albiani.

ROCKLAND HAS GROUP

Perhaps the outstanding pride and joy of the juniors is the Rockland group, to whom Mrs. Lelyveld is the adviser. Their list of community services and welfare endeavors in the past year are endless. The group is one of the largest in the state with a membership of 37. The enthusiasm of these juniors is without comparison anywhere in the state.

The Rockland Juniors DO things. The two-and-a-half-year old crippled baby, whom they have adopted as their very own, is literally showered with attention and gifts and affection and adoration. Good work.

In Quincy the juniors are also very active. The Quincy Woman's Club is soon to celebrate its 29th anniversary, but what their juniors are to do as their share in the celebration is a dead secret.

Mrs. Homer told the group, but swore the press to secrecy.

Mrs. Wolley told of her West Newton Juniors, who sold $121 worth of postcards at Yuletide, turning over $70 to the senior organization. Not so bad, is it, for a group of 20 girls?

The Philterjians of Braintree have always been in a class by themselves. Right now they have a waiting list, Mrs. Woolsum told the conference.

In Framingham, Mrs. Davenport recited, the juniors have been organized about three years with a present membership of 45. On March 4 they are to furnish the entertainment for the senior woman's club and are to present a shawl pageant, in which the girls will have a chorus, read, sing and do many things.

It is the first such enterprise for the group and anticipation is keen. Next month they are to sponsor a bridge party that their contribution to the Home for the Aged may be a mighty one.

And so on down the list. Each junior club is a factor all by itself for good and progress in the community.

The juniors of the Woman's Charity Club, a powerful group, have recently taken over the nurses of the Massachusetts Woman's Hospital, which the senior club supports and maintains, as their piece of philanthropic endeavor. And the service keeps the young ones very busy. On February 12 when the parent group gives its cabaret, the juniors will be represented.

The Newton Centre Juniors are to have a Mother's Day in March with a minister as the speaker. Fifty are in this club although, 80 juniors are on the list.

And so the splendid work of the junior membership department continues. And on this foundation does the State Federation of Women's Clubs place its hopes and aspirations of the future.

Blazer Strip Pajamas in School Colors Are Popular

PAJAMAS that win their letters by their smartness and clever styling now enter the dormitories of college and prep school. They are blazer striped in school colors, and in addition wear the school initial as a design in the stripe.

Vassar, Smith and Wellesley are represented in these collegiate pajamas, but the V., S. and W. are not necessarily limited to the representatives of these three schools.

Whether or not the trousered pajamas would survive the trend toward extreme femininity is a question soon settled by the appearance of hostess pajamas made of luxurious fabrics in distinctly feminine styles.

Lame, velvet, chiffon and other lovely materials of the mode combine to add beauty and richness to the pajama fashion. Even the uneven hemline appears in the pajama whose trouser hems trail gracefully. The flowing sleeves, smart peplums, and lovely style details that characterize the tea gowns also adorn the garment.

LOUISE BOULANGER has created a similar costume which combines a long skirted coat of white semi-sheer silk brocaded in silver, with yellow trousers. This model definitely suggests the tea gown, as the skirt of the coat trails on the floor in back. So charming is this idea that it is sure to captivate those moderns who have time to be leisurely.

The glorified version of a jockey's suit is Schiaparelli's idea of a pajama costume suitable for resort wear. Black horses prance over the vivid blue, yellow, orange and green silk print of the short jacket and jodhpur-like trousers. The sandals worn are intricately strapped affairs of white calfskin with red underlays.

Tea-Gown Pajama Is Latest Creation of Fashion

A TEA-GOWN PAJAMA is the very latest and most luxurious conceit for informal home entertaining. This clever creation combines the comfortable nonchalance of the pajama and charming gracefulness of the tea gown. It is the ideal costume for either tea or informal dining at home as it is in perfect accord with the new formality which pervades the social scheme.

Vionnet has designed the original of the fascinating tea-gown pajama shown here. As you see, it is more formal than the usual lounging pajama and it has the fluid grace of the tea gown. Periwinkle panne velvet and crepe roma fashion the tunic, which tucks into full pleated trousers that suggest a trailing skirt. The sleeves, also pleated, subtly carry out the same sweeping lines of the trousers.

Negligees Adopt Short Cut to Smartness

WITH gowns that trail and uneven petticoats, the season's new negligees adopt a short cut to smartness and abbreviate their length to reveal sweeping skirts of silk and lace. This one of flesh-colored velvet is a charming example of a style that is highly becoming. With soft shoulder drapery, surplice closing, and rounded upward in the front, the garment is a graceful follower of some of the newest edicts of fashion.

HUB FIRM'S AID APPROVED BY FARM BOARD

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—Approval of an application of the National Wool Marketing Corporation for supplemental credit that would enable more liberal advances to producers of wool and mohair was announced today by the farm board.

The board announced that the credit advances would be aside from that given by federal intermediate credit banks and other sources and would be extended to the grower when his wool was delivered to the regional co-operative association.

The board also announced it had approved a contract entered into by the wool corporation with Draper & Co., Inc., of Boston, for the latter to act as exclusive agent for the corporation in the selling of all wool and mohair consigned to the corporation by its member co-operative associations.

Draper & Co.'s entire organization will be available to the corporation.

Contracts between the corporation and the regional co-operatives and individual grower members were approved by the board. It was said that from 25 to 30 per cent of the 1930 domestic clip was expected to be marketed through the corporation.

English Tongue More Dangerous Than Parrot Fever

Mexico City, Jan. 16 (AP)—Enrique Bavedra brought his six brilliantly-colored parrots from Puebla to Mexico City, where he supposed he might more easily find treatment if the dread psittacosis attacked them.

Someone commented to him, however, regarding the rapid infiltration of English in the Mexican capital with the advent of the American talkie. Enrique Savedra pondered the matter for a while, and today he decided to take his parrots back to Puebla.

Better psittacosis, he reasoned, than for his birds to use an English noun and Spanish verb in the same sentence.

STARTS RELIEF IN CHINA FOR 2 MILLIONS

Shanghai, Jan. 16 (AP)—Organization was started here today to give relief to the distressed populace of Shansi, Kansu and Shansi provinces, where two million persons are reported to have died of starvation in the last eight months, and two million more are said to be doomed within a few months unless aided.

Cannibalism is reported to be common by those slowly dying of famine.

The National Christian Council, a co-operative organization of Protestant missions in China, announced that in response to the request of the New York committee of the China International famine relief committee the work of mercy has begun; a committee of American business men and missionaries was formed in readiness to take up the duties which the New York committee suggested for "supervising the expected famine relief funds."

Revelations in the past 48 hours both here and in Peiping concerning the famine in the three interior provinces have made a tremendous impression in foreign circles.

American missionaries said that a relief drive in America was "bound to result from these unquestionably accurate statements of famine conditions."

Cutter Committed to State Hospital

Concord, N. H., Jan. 16 (AP)—Guy H. Cutter, former treasurer of the South Congregational Church and the New Hampshire Anti-Saloon League, today was committed to the state hospital for observation. Dr. Charles H. Dolloff, superintendent of the hospital announced.

Discrepancies in Cutter's church accounts were alleged to have been discovered recently, and he resigned his position with the Anti-Saloon League.

Fight in Restaurant Starts Big Run on Chicago Bank

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—A fight in a restaurant two doors from the institution two weeks ago was blamed for the closing today of the Independence State Bank by officials who said the assets had become impaired because of heavy withdrawals.

Answering the call to the restaurant the police patrol parked in front of the bank, which gave rise to a rumor that a run on the institution was in progress.

More than $1,600,000 in deposits has been withdrawn since that, bank officials said.

BIT OF JOY FOR CHICAGO JURY

Chicago, Jan. 16 (INS)—An amazing story, that jurors in the murder trial of Samuel Howard Dorr were revelling unguarded in a "soft drink" parlor, an establishment where liquor was said to have been served, was told here today by a woman to the presiding judge, Harry E. Miller, in his chambers before the resumption of the trial.

At least five, possibly seven, of the jurors and two bailiffs were involved in the woman's story.

STUDY CHANGES IN GOLD STAR PILGRIMAGE

Washington, Jan. 16—Amendments to liberalize the gold star mothers' pilgrimage act were considered at an executive session of the House military affairs committee.

Many questions have arisen since the passage of the bill in Congress which entitles gold star mothers and widows to visit the European graves of their sons and husbands who died in the World War.

The amendments have tended to complicate an already intricate and detailed itinerary outlined by the War Department, which will have charge of the series of pilgrimages.

Members of the House, in submitting amendments have attempted to extend the bill to include foster-mothers, sisters and guardians of the dead war heroes.

The meeting, under the chairmanship of Rep. W. Frank James of Michigan, took up all the questions which have arisen since the proposed amendments. These include consideration of whether mothers and widows who have already visited the European graves are to be allowed to make a second trip, at the Government's expense.

Another provision has to do with mothers whose sons are buried at sea, while still another problem to be solved is whether the mothers may stay in Europe over the allotted time of two weeks.

The original bill provides:

"The pilgrimages shall be by the shortest practicable route and for the shortest practicable time, to be designated by the Secretary of War. No mother or widow shall be provided for at government expense in Europe for a longer period than two weeks from the time of disembarkment in Europe to the time of re-embarkation in Europe, except in case of illness or other unavoidable cause.

BERLIN WINTER GARTEN DANCER RAOUL WALSH'S NEW SCREEN "FIND"

HER NAME IS KATIE KARLIN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Universal Service Motion Picture Editor
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16.—Raoul Walsh went to Europe to find two girls and returned with one. Now don't get alarmed with the way this sounds. Mrs. Walsh was right with her husband and it was at her suggestion that Katie Karlin, a dancer at the Berlin Winter Garten was put under contract and brought back to Hollywood to play in "The Oregon Trail."

That is the title of the next Walsh production and it has nothing to do with those two saucy mariners, Victor McLaglen and Edmund Lowe. "The Oregon Trail, is by Francis Parkinson and is a story of pioneer days. It deals with the times of the Lewis and Clarke expedition, and come to think of it, isn't this the first talkie to go back to "The Covered Wagon" period. Raoul tells an amusing story on Mrs. Walsh. She went all over Europe window shopping and never bought so much as a dress. (United States merchants please note.)

IT is always pleasant in this business when a star or a director starts sliding downhill to have them make a conspicuous success and come back stronger than ever. That is what happened to Hobart Henley. Out here in Hollywood in the film industry it was rumored that Henley was through. That he had shot his bolt, and had made his best pictures. Hobart went to Paramount and turned out a couple of such good writers that the first thing we knew he was numbered among the most promising of the dialogue directors. He has just finished "The Big Pond" with Maurice Chevalier and that's all. He has signed a new contract with Paramount and his next picture will be the next Chevalier comedy, which goes into production in March. And here is a little heartbreak for those who like the delightful Chevaliers. They remain in New York for Mr. Chevalier's next picture.

MONTE BLUE has had a complete change of heart as regards Warner Brothers. He publicly stated in an impromptu speech that he had been with this company 10 years and was perfectly satisfied with his affiliations. In fact, that Warners have been fine to him. I speak of this because every time Monte's contract in the past has been ready to expire he threatened to make a change. It's nice that at last Monte and Warners have gotten together and everybody now have a perfect understanding.

Monte wore a trick haircut that attracted considerable attention. The parents of the Warner Brothers among those present at the Roosevelt and having a grand time. Julianne Johnstone wearing long earrings and looking particularly lovely, dancing with Harold Grieve, young Hollywood artist. "PARTY GIRL" MARKS POLICY CHANGE AT MODERN-BEACON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

LIKE TOPSY in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the motion picture business in Boston has "just growed." And how! And with it, and into it, and at the front of it, has stepped Jacob Lourie, a pioneer exhibitor with a record of achievement. Mr. Lourie is the treasurer-general-manager of Netoco, a household word in New England. In the trade he is known as one of the shrewdest of buyers of films; he has the keenest sense of motion picture value. He knows the industry by experience from the bottom up. He and his colleagues in Netoco have a number of pioneering feats to their credit; they planned the nation's first de luxe picture theater; they had the first modern cooling installation; they had the first "Broadway" marquee in New England; and Mr. Lourie himself ran upon the screen the first serial. Details of this last feature are interesting; many years ago, because of the effect of the early flickering shadows upon the eyes, the law limited the pictures to 20-minute periods. Stage shows had to be sandwiched in between the movies. Along came "The Tale of Two Cities" in three reels; under the law it was too long for one showing. Liking the film, Mr. Lourie purchased it, showed part of it, and at the end of the first section flashed a slide saying it would be finished later in the week. It was, to a sold-out business. It was the first of the serials.

Jacob Lourie

IT should be stated right here that the Modern and Beacon theaters, controlled by Netoco, on next Saturday will swing to first run showings of big films. The first will be "Party Girl," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. After that will come other new productions, all of them from the Tiffany studios at Hollywood.

IF Mr. Lourie had the vision of motion picture development 21 years ago, he has it in greater degree today. "There is no limit to the industry, he puts it. "When I started my career in pictures, I declared the business was then in its infancy. Again, in the light of its amazing development recently, I must look at the future and declare again: The industry is still in its infancy. The talking pictures are here to remain, the amazing progress of the next few years will be in the development of this new art. New inventions, new acting talent, new ideas, all presage the best that is yet to come. For, one thing the masses will soon see and hear grand opera at popular prices."

IT is a matter of great pride with us that the same group that started together continued through the years; of the five that began, two are dead, Arthur Grosberg and Joseph Richmond. Three survive, Nathan Pinanski, James Solomon and myself. These men in 1908 had faith in motion pictures; they invested $100,000 at the start, a large sum in those early days. Today, as the Netoco corporation—New England Theater Operating Co.—we have a tremendous investment in many theaters. It may be worth noting that during 1929, 15,000,000 persons paid admissions to be entertained in our Netoco houses! At the head of our corporation today is Samuel Pinanski, son of our pioneer and a notable combination of executive ability and genius for architecture. We are still growing, keeping pace with the fast-developing industry.

APPLE A DAY GAG RILES CISSY

CISSY FITZGERALD, the popular rotund motion picture actress, hasn't much use for anyone who pulls the new well known "gag" of "an apple a day keeps the doctor away."

It's all because she had to go on an 18-hour apple diet for her role in "The Painted Angel," Billie Dove's latest First National talking and singing Vitaphone picture, showing at the Fenway next Saturday.

Miss Fitzgerald never did like apples, but she had to eat them for two days while making comedy scenes in the talkie. Eighteen hours she spent on the set making and retaking the scenes.

Property men started the apples rolling from the studio commissary to the sound stage. The red apples gave out, and they substituted brown and finally green ones to keep up the demands of the director.

From now on all apples are barred from Miss Fitzgerald's kitchen, even for apple-sauce.

Millard Webb directed "the Painted Angel," which snows Miss Dove as a "cookin', lookin', night club hostess. Edmund Lowe appears as her leading man.

ALPERT RULES NIGHT LIFE

EVER since Mickie Alpert got his first taste of the show business he knew there wasn't a chance of his seeking any other career. He was barely 37 at the time and with a lot of youthful confidence Mickie applied for a part in Victor Hyde's Loew's Orpheum Frolic. He got the job. There followed a few months of brainstorming through New England towns and villages. Some years have elapsed. Mickie's rise has been steady. Known to radio listeners, an outstanding figure in the town's bright night life, Mickie has sung and smiled his way to success. His goal is theatrical production.

Crickets Gassed for Annoying Microphone

The United States army has a reputation of taking nothing from anybody, so it stood to reason that it wasn't going to take any back talk from a cricket. And that is just what it didn't do when Gregory La Cava, directing William Boyd in "His First Command," now at the Keith-Albee, went to Fort Riley, Kansas, to take exterior scenes with the dashing horse soldiers.

How to take the crick out of crickets—that was the problem of Fort Riley. A conference of the staff followed. The military was called in. The problem was solved. "Gas 'em!"

"Yes, sir," drawled Bill Boyd when he got back in Culver City, "we just fed 'em a little of that tear gas and they cried themselves to death."

MUSICAL ART GROUP WELL RECEIVED

By MOSES SMITH

THE Musical Art Quartet gave the second of its series of three concerts in Jordan Hall last night, playing quartets by Mozart, Vittorio Rieti and Schumann.

In the old days it used to be a truism that a string quartet concert was the highest form of musical art, for listener as well as player. But we live in an age of speed, when few are willing to concentrate to the extent that a chamber music concert demands. It is the age of the flashing, brilliant, often noisy, ever-spectacular orchestra and the virtuoso conductor.

Nevertheless, there was a fair-sized assemblage to hear this New York organization. This audience enjoyed itself keenly and applauded quite as honestly —but less ostentatiously—as a crowd at a football game. The fact that this applause was warranted by the quality of music-making, was an additional boon to the person who wants above all music in the concert room.

This quartet plays with admirable musicality, with nice tone-balance, despite the fact that its first violinist, Sascha Jacobsen, is a notable virtuoso. There was no attempt on his part to make the ensemble a melody with three voiced accompaniment. There was an insight, on the part of all hands, into the character and emotional content of the music, whether it was the classic, limpid Mozart, or the emotional, occasionally turbulent Schumann.

The Rieti composition, which was produced three years ago, is music of our own time without being angularly dissonant in the current fashion. It has charm, as much as a work of our day can have. It has genuine melody. The audience received it delightedly.

4 INDICTED IN $3,000,000 CRASH

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Indictments charging use of the mails to defraud were returned today by a federal grand jury against Bankers Capital Corporation, Eastern Bankers Corporation, American Fiduciary Corporation and Howard H. Gunder, Roland J. Randall, Everett J. Sturges and Philip Gunder Sturges, formerly State banking commissioner of Connecticut, was president of the Bankers Capital Company of Connecticut; Howard H. Gunder was chairman of the board of directors of Bankers Capital, Randall was president of the Bankers Capital; Philip Gunder is a brother of Howard and one of the directors.

The Bankers Capital failed in November with an estimated resulting loss to investors of $3,000,000.

There are six counts in the indictment, five of which charge the mailing of matter containing false representations as a part of an effort to dispose of securities of the Bankers Capital corporation, the other defendant corporation, and various other allied concerns.

EDWARDS HITS AT DRY LAW

door—a great Court to protect you from tyranny and wrong. Where is it? Is it dead or does it only sleep?

"Where are the sons of those who before the great Washington upon their oath pledged that first "immutable principle" that they would "preserve inviolate those exalted rights and liberties of human nature for which they fought and bled."

"Have you no fighting men to stand forth in this hour of your country's weakness? Shall fanatics who frantically appeal to the order of the coast guard "We shont to kill" be the dictators of your destinies? Wake up, America!

NEW FREEDOM MARCH.

"And the answer came back out—and then through the far flung of the darkness—"We were asleep" reaches of our country I heard the tramping of millions of the following great pageants as they passed down the streets of our cities and towns — pageants of liberty and glory surrounding the birth of our great Nation intermingled with pictures of the degradation prohibition has brought to our people.

"Great liberty parades, inspiring uplifting, enlightening, teaching us a truer patriotism, renewing our faith, awakening us to a higher nobility of spirit, a truer love of our country, revealing that the armor of defense of our manhood and womanhood is characterized not the threat of the gun and the prison cell, showing to our people what a futile, what a dangerous, what a wicked thing it was to attempt to enforce an unenforcible, un-American, unholy law.

"They might just as well try to raise up an immovable body to resist that which is going and has ever gone out from this sacred place, the irresistible force of liberty."

CONG. SCHAFER SPEAKS

Congressman Schafer said in part:

"Ten years of prohibition proves that the three stupendous outstanding peace-time problems in the history of our people are: first, oppression which resulted in the Declaration of Independence and the Revolutionary War; second, slavery which resulted in the Civil War, and third, prohibition, the curse which is destroying our institutions.

"No one can deny that 10 years of prohibition has shown that the libertyloving American people do not respect and revere the sumptuary dry laws which embody the principles of inquisitorial tyranny, and which have ushered in an age of corruption, intemperance, disrespect for law and contempt for government such as this nation never before witnessed.

"The American people are now spending more money for more alcoholic beverages than they ever did before prohibition. Much of the liquor consumed today is filling the insane asylums, jails and graveyards, and is doing irreparable harm to the well-being and health of this and future generations.

"We were promised that prohibition would empty the penitentiaries, but we find today almost every jail in the country filled beyond capacity and the courts congested with pending prohibition cases."

Millions of Russian Peasants Beg for Tractors, Machinery

Soviets Develop Ace of All Wheat Farms Within Two Years

By FRAZIER HUNT
European Representative for Cosmopolitan Magazine
Written especially for International News Service.

(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service, in the United States and all foreign countries. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

London, Jan. 16—A peasant boy walking a hundred miles to see a tractor and to learn how to drive it.

Decade of American tractors plowing furrows five miles long in the rich, black, virgin earth of the giant farm of the Soviets—the greatest wheat farm in the world, now barely two years old.

Millions of poor peasants flocking into collective farm units and pleading for tractors and modern machinery—a mass movement beyond belief and beyond proof.

NEW LIFE DIDN'T COME

In 1917 the 125,000,000 peasants took the land and divided it up among themselves. With their age-long land hunger satisfied they felt that they were on the verge of a new life. But it did not come. No rewards were theirs—no better homes, schools, dresses, shoes, plows, machinery—no better life. The "dark" villages, a million of them scattered over the vast reaches of mighty Russia, remained dark villages—unlit by new hopes, new ideas, education, better equipment, electricity.

They belonged to the past. They plowed and planted and reaped as their grandfathers' serfs had done a century before. The cities had failed them. The cities took their wheat and their sons and gave them nothing in return but words.

Then out from the golden-domed Kremlin in far away Moscow—out from the hated cities—out from America—came the idea. It blew like the strong winds that pound and sing their way across the great prairies.

NEW PROMISES

"Machinery will do it! Come together! Co-operate—bring in modern machinery! Industrialize the land, and comforts and a decent life will be yours."

These were the new promises and the high hopes that were blown over the Soviet land.

The State church, beautiful but inadequate, was pounded and propagandized and taxed out of business and in its place came the new god of machinery. And the old sacred ikon in the corner of the living room was replaced by a poster of an American tractor.

For five years now they have been building up this machine god. Salvation is promised—salvation from the hopeless, backward, ignorant past and from the hard, cruel and bitter present.

HOPE FOR RICHES

It is impossible to overestimate what the tractor alone means to these hundred million peasants. It has captured their whole imagination. It is the symbol of all machinery—and machinery is their new god.

"The tractor will give us freedom," a bearded old peasant in the south of Russia said to me. "We will work less and the tractor will plow better than we can do with horses. Machinery will free us peasants." And then with a twinkle in his wise old eyes he added, "We don't have to feed the tractors in the winter time when they are not working."

Another shrewd old peasant in an adjoining village said to me: "We don't belong to the collective now, but we will pretty soon. We've seen tractors. They can plow better than we can. They'll make us all rich some day."

So it goes all over great Russia. In every village are a little group of young men who have been in the Red Army or worked in the cities and have been set on fire with the idea of collective ownership of modern machinery. They are the leaven that slowly is awakening the Red consciousness of these countless millions.

They have given the initial momentum to this great mass movement that is beginning to sweep over Soviet land, crushing all opposition, breaking down all barriers, spreading the new, the real revolution.

FORCE GOOD FARMERS OUT

In many ways it is not a pretty picture. At least five million of the best individual farmers, the most intelligent, the ablest and most necessary are being ruthlessly and consciously crushed to death.

With the failure of the cities to supply goods and comforts to the villages in return for their grain, the Russian peasant individually went on the greatest strike in all history. He simply refused to grow any more grain than he needed for himself. What was the use of a sock full of paper roubles if you couldn't buy anything with them?

And so it was the great war between the cities and the country was fought out in 1929 and 1921. The peasant won and Lenin brought in his new economic policy that permitted private trading and the more intelligent and shrewder peasant to again become a minor capitalist. He could again employ labor and loan money. He was dubbed "Kulak"—the fist.

Of course the more he prospered the more he was despised. With Lenin's death Trotsky wanted to crush him at once. Over this point Trotsky—to many the natural heir to the imperial purple of the great Lenin—and Stalin quarrelled.

BEING MADE POORER

In the end Trotsky was exiled from Soviet Russia and then Stalin adopted Trotzky's theory of crushing this hated Kulak—but added to it this tremendous and startling dream of industrializing the backward Russia land and making it a part and parcel of the whole audacious five-year industrialization plan that is to make or break the Soviets.

Today this good farmer—this hard-fisted individualistic man of the soil is being sweatcured out of his property, his horses and cattle and equipment, and he is being made poorer than the most indolent, most stupid peasant in all Russia.

He is disfranchised, all privileges are taken from him, he is stripped of his goods and wealth, his children excluded from schools and he himself refused the right to go into the collectives and cooperatives that are to replace all individual farming.

Naturally, he fights back. He burns and destroys and kills—and then he is tried before a Red people's court, and taken out and shot.

"WE MUST CRUSH"

It is a cruelly difficult to understand—this stamping out of all that is most capable among the peasantry.

"You see, we must crush this rich and powerful peasant or he will crush us," one of the leaders of the national collective movement explained to me.

"If we let him into our collective, even after we have stripped him of his property he will dominate the collective. He is shrewder today than the poorer peasants. We must destroy him just as we destroyed the aristocracy and bourgeoisie of the cities.

"Once he is eliminated we can march ahead with our great dream of mechanizing the country life, and in the end of making a new and free citizen of the world from this dark, illiterate peasant of today."

THIS is the fourth of a series of six articles on present-day Russia which Frazier Hunt, war correspondent and magazine writer, has written exclusively for International News Service. Today Hunt tells us something of what happens when 100,000,000 peasants actually do "red." The Lenin and Trotzky "intellectual" revolution of 1917, he says, was a mere scratching of the surface.

Tomorrow's article will tell of the plans for establishing "tractor centers" throughout the agricultural sections of Russia, and of eventually making these "tractor centers" the educational, social, manufacturing and government centers for the communities in which they are located. The "tractor center" is the crux of the whole "five-year plan."

PEACE SHIP IN A STORM AT SEA

mediately take a train for London, arriving there about 2 p. m. Friday.

The Americans will arrive in England without having formulated definitely plans of procedure, but it is considered likely this will be discussed at the conference tomorrow of Col. Stimson and Prime Minister MacDonald.

It is the American delegation's hope that as far as possible the negotiations be directed specifically to the purpose of the conference, that is, consideration of what changes can be made in the battleship provisions of the Washington treaty and what limitations can be placed on other categories of ships.

Members of the delegation have been unwilling to comment on the possibility that other elements, such as the French suggestion of Mediterranean security pacts, may become seriously involved with these purposes.

In some of the suggestions thus far advanced, such as the Mediterranean pacts, the delegation feels it has no concern, while others hitherto discussed are not likely to gain the Americans' approval.

'FIND' EIELSON IN WILDS OF SIBERIA

Moscow, Jan. 16 (AP)—A report that Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland were near the river Anguemy, Siberia, was received by the Soviet government today.

Although it was not confirmed, the Soviet authorities ordered a dog sled expedition to the place.

The Soviet Arctic commission in Moscow, which has been in charge of the Russian efforts to find the fliers, was notified that its radio station at Anadyr, Siberia, had received a report on January 14 that Eielson and Borland had landed near the River Anguemy.

This report came from Radio Operator Kyrilenko at Penkingly, who said he had received a letter dated December 30 from Cape Wellen, reporting the missing airmen.

Despite the lack of confirmation of this report, the government gave immediate instructions to Capt. Mihnovsorov of the Soviet steamer Stavropol, now marooned in the ice near North Cape, to dispatch a disguised expedition to the area in question and to search for the missing Americans.

Instruction also were given to the Soviet fliers Gladshev and Slepnev, who are now in the region of Cape Providence, to join in the search by airplane. Another searching party will be dispatched from Cape Wellen. Meanwhile, the government is taking all measures to verify the report.

SHIP COLLISION SUIT FILED

New York, Jan. 16—A suit for $1,500,000, placing all the blame for the sinking of the liner Fort Victoria upon the Clyde Mallory liner Algonquin, has been brought in the federal court by the Bermuda & West Indes Steamship Company Ltd., it was learned today.

The suit was brought to tight through the filing of a petition by the Clyde Mallory line to limit its liability in the case. The Fort Victoria was rammed and sunk by the Algonquin in the fog in Ambrose channel at the entrance to New York harbor on December 18 with out loss of life.

The Bermuda & West Indes Company sued as owner of the sunken vessel, and as bailee of her cargo, engines and equipment and of the personal effects of the passengers and crew.

Anti-MacDonald Speech Wins Praise, Censure

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Jan. 16—Mingled praise and censure followed today in the wake of the two widely divergent views on the disarmament question offered by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald and William C. Bridgeman, former First Lord of the Admiralty in the deposed cabinet of Premier Stanley Baldwin.

While Premier MacDonald, striking in an optimistic vein with foreign newspaper correspondents, figured they had things in chimney, incited entirely by the naval powers of the world and cruisers drastically reduced, Bridgeman launched a bitter attack against the entire disarmament activities of the MacDonald government.

The Laborites regard Bridgeman's address as the "swan song" of the big navy men, but the Conservatives, on the other hand, seem likely to take it up as a battle cry and pit all their forces to prevent MacDonald's alleged "idealism."

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—A brown leather book bearing the pleas of 12,000,000 American women for armament reduction will be presented to the naval reduction conference in London the first week in February, along with the 180,000 signatures of Japanese women to a similar petition.

Mrs. Edgerton Parsons of New York, treasurer of the Cause and Cure of War conference being held here, will head the delegation taking the book to London.

In the brown leather book are the resolutions passed by the conference the combined membership of which includes one-fifth of the adult women of the United States, urging drastic enough a reduction in naval armament to forever end competition in naval building. The book contains also signatures of heads of the various state delegations attending the conference.

Holds Up Woman and Gets Glass of Water

New York, Jan. 16 (INS)—Opening the door of her mid-town apartment, Mrs. Lyndall M. Olmstead discovered a young man busily engaged in packing a suitcase with her clothing.

"Stick up your hands," he commanded, leveling an imitation revolver.

Noticing the youth's nervousness and the toy pistol, Mrs. Olmstead got him a glass of water.

Relieved, the would-be bandit sat down and poured out his troubles.

The management of the apartment, learning of the episode, notified police.

Whereupon Mrs. Olmstead, the wife of Henry Marshall Olmstead and former treasurer of the League of American Pen Women, announced that she would appear in court today and defend the 19-year-old boy.

Preliminary Trial of Travers Halted

Providence, Jan. 16 (AP)—At the joint request of U. S. Atty. Henry M. Boss, Jr., and Attorney John H Backus of Boston and Daniel T Hagan of Providence, counsel for the defense, U. S. Commissioner Archibald C. Matteson today indefinitely postponed the preliminary trial of Charles Travers, Fairhaven, Mass., sole survivor of the shooting of the motorboat Black Duck in which three run-runners were killed by coast guardsmen.

Travers' case was to be heard today. He is out on $10,000 bail. No reason was assigned for the postponement.

BERLIN WINTER GARTEN DANCER RAOUL WALSH'S NEW SCREEN "FIND"

HER NAME IS KATIE KARLIN

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS

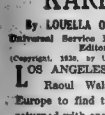
(Copyright, 1930, by Universal Service.)

LOS ANGELES, Jan. 16—Raoul Walsh went to Europe to find two girls and returned with one. Now don't get alarmed with the way this sounds, Mrs. Walsh was right with her husband and it was at her suggestion that Katie Karlin, a dancer at the Berlin Winter Garten was put under contract and brought back to Hollywood to play in "The Oregon Trail."

That is the title of the next Walsh production and it has nothing to do with Indians.



Louella O. Parsons

Instead it is a romance of the days when Lewis and Clarke expedition, and come to think of it, isn't this the first talkie to go back to "The Covered Wagon" period. Raoul tells an amusing story on Mrs. Walsh. She went all over Europe window shopping and never bought much as a dress. (United States merchants please note.)

IT is always pleasant in this business when a star or a director starts sliding downhill to have them make a conspicuous success and come back stronger than ever. That is what happened to Hobart Bosworth. Out here in Hollywood in the film industry it was rumored that Henley was through. That he had shot his bolt and had made his best pictures. Hobart went to Paramount and turned out a couple of such good sellers that the first thing we knew he was numbered among the most promising of the dialogue directors. He has just finished "The Big Pond" with Maurice Chevalier and that isn't all. He has signed a new contract with Paramount and his next picture will be the next Chevalier comedy, which goes into production in March. And here is a little heartbreak for those who like the delightful Chevaliers. They remain in New York for Mr. Chevalier's next picture.

A MONTE BLUE has had a complete change of heart as regards Warner Brothers. He publicly stated in an impromptu speech that he had been with this company 10 years and was perfectly satisfied with his affiliations. In fact, that Warners have been fine to him. I speak of this because every time Monte's contract in the past has been ready to expire he threatened to make a change. It's nice that at last Monte and Warners have gotten together and apparently now have a perfect understanding.

SNAPSHOTS of Hollywood collected at random: Colleen Moore being greeted by her, and Mrs. Sam H. Harris at the Irving Berlin Night at the Blossom Room of the Roosevelt Hotel. Sam Harris being given a thunderous round of applause when he was introduced by Chester Olsen. Monte Blue surprising everyone by rising to his feet and making a very nice little speech. Monte wore a trick haircut that attracted considerable attention. The parents of the Warner Brothers among those present at the Roosevelt and having a grand time. Johanne Johnstone wearing long earrings and looking particularly lovely, dancing with Harold Grieve, young Hollywood artist. Vivienne Oakland, one of Hollywood's attractive blondes, dancing with her husband, John T. Murray. Frances MacDonald and his bride being given a royal reception by some of Francis' buddies. That's all today. See you tomorrow!

"PARTY GIRL" MARKS POLICY CHANGE AT MODERN-BEACON

By HARLEIGH SCHULTZ

LIKE TOPSY in "Uncle Tom's Cabin," the motion picture business in Boston has "just growed." And how! And with it, and into it, and at the front of it, has stepped Jacob Lourie, a pioneer exhibitor with a record of achievement. Mr. Lourie is the treasurer-general-manager of Netoco, a household word in New England. In the trade he is known as one of the shrewdest of buyers of films; he has the keenest sense of motion picture values.

Jacob Lourie

He knows the industry by experience from the bottom up. He and his colleagues in Netoco have a number of pioneering feats to their credit; they planned the nation's first de luxe picture theater; they had the first modern cooling installation; they had the first Sally Theatre marquee in New England; and Mr. Lourie himself ran upon the screen the first newsreel. Both of this last feature are interesting; many years ago, because of the effect of the early flickering shadows upon the eye, the law limited the pictures in 20-minute periods. Stage shows had to be sandwiched in between the movies. Along came "The Tale of Two Cities" in three reels; under the law it was too long for one showing. Taking the film, Mr. Lourie purchased it, showed part of it, and at the end of the first section flashed a slide saying it would be finished later in the week. It was, to a sold-out business. It was the first of the serials.

IT should be stated right here that the Modern and Beacon theaters, controlled by Netoco, on next Saturday will swing to first run showings of big films. The first will be "Party Girl," starring Douglas Fairbanks, Jr. After that will come other new productions, all of them from the Tiffany studios at Hollywood.

IF Mr. Lourie had the vision of motion picture development 21 years ago, he has it in greater degree today. "There is no limit to the industry, he puts it. "When I started my career in pictures, I declared the business was then in its infancy. Again, in the light of its amazing development recently, I must look at the future and declare again: The industry is still in its infancy. The talking pictures are here to remain, the amazing process of the next few years will be in the development of this new art. New inventions, new acting talent, new ideas, all presage the best that is yet to come. For, one thing the masses will soon see and hear grand opera at popular prices."

IT is a matter of great pride with us that the same group that started together continued through the years; of the five that began, two are dead, Arthur Grosberg and Joseph Richmond. Three survive, Nathan Pinanski, James Solomon and myself. These men in 1908 had faith in motion pictures; they invested $100,000 at the start, a large sum in those early days. Today, as the Netoco corporation—New England Theater Operating Co.—we have a tremendous investment in many theaters. It may be worth noting that during 1929, 15,000,000 persons paid admissions to be entertained in our Netoco houses! At the head of our corporation today is Samuel Pinanski, son of our pioneer and a notable combination of executive ability and genius for architecture. We are still growing, keeping pace with the fast-developing industry.

APPLE A DAY GAG RILES CISSY

CISSY FITZGERALD, the popular round motion picture actress, hasn't much use for anyone who pulls the new well known "gag" of "an apple a day keeps the doctor away."

It's all because she had to go on an 18-hour apple diet for her role in "The Painted Angel," Billie Dove's latest First National talking and singing telephone picture, showing at the Fenway next Saturday.

Miss Fitzgerald never did like apples, but she had to eat them for two days while making comedy scenes in the talkie. Eighteen hours she spent on the set making and retaking the scenes.

Properly men supplied the apples rolling from the studio commissary to the sound stage. The red apples gave out, and they substituted brown and finally green ones to keep up the demands of the director.

From now on all apples are barred from Miss Fitzgerald's kitchen, even for applesauce.

Millard Webb directed "the Painted Angel," which stows Miss Dove as a rootin', tootin' night club hostess. Edmund Lowe appears as her leading man.

ALPERT RULES NIGHT LIFE

EVER since Mickie Alpert got his first taste of the show business he knew there wasn't a chance of his seeking any other career. He was barely 17 at the time and with a lot of youthful confidence Mickie applied for a part in Victor Hyde's Loew's Orpheum Frolic. He got the job. There followed a few months of transforming through New England towns and villages. Some years have elapsed. Mickie's rise has been steady. Known to radio listeners, an outstanding figure in the town's bright night life, Mickie has sung and smiled his way to success. His goal is theatrical production.

Crickets Gassed for Annoying Microphone

The United States army has a reputation of taking nothing from anybody, so it stood to reason that it wasn't going to take any back talk from a cricket. And that is just what it didn't do when Gregory La Cava, directing William Boyd in "His First Command," now at the Keith-Albee, went to Fort Riley, Kansas, to take exterior scenes with the dashing horse soldiers.

How to take the crick out of crickets—that was the problem of Fort Riley. A conference of the staff followed. The militiary was called in. The problem was solved. "Gas 'em!"

"Yes, sir," drawled Bill Boyd when he got back in Culver City, "we just fed 'em a little of that tear gas and they cried themselves to death."

MUSICAL ART GROUP WELL RECEIVED

By MOSES SMITH

THE Musical Art Quartet gave the second of its series of three concerts in Jordan Hall last night, playing quartets by Mozart, Vittorio Rieti and Schubert.

In the old days it used to be a truism that a string quartet concert was the highest form of musical art, for listener as well as player. But we live in an age of speed, when few are willing to concentrate to the extent that a chamber music concert demands. It is the age of the flashing, brilliant, often noisy, overspectacular orchestra and the virtuoso conductor.

Nevertheless, there was a fair-sized assemblage to hear this New York organization. This audience enjoyed itself keenly and applauded quite as honestly —but less ostentatiously—as a crowd at a football game. The fact that this applause was warranted by the quality of music-making, was an additional boon to the person who wants above all music in the concert room.

This quartet plays with admirable musicality, with nice tone-balance, despite the fact that its first violinist, Sascha Jacobsen, is a notable virtuoso. There was no attempt on his part to make the ensemble a melody with three-voiced accompaniment. There was an insight, on the part of all hands, into the character and emotional content of the music, whether it was the classic, limpid Mozart, or the emotional, occasionally turbulent Schumann.

The Rieti composition, which was produced three years ago, is music of our own time without being angularly dissonant in the current fashion. It has charm, as much as a work of our day can have. It has genuine melody. The audience received it delightedly.

4 INDICTED IN $3,000,000 CRASH

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Indictments charging use of the mails to defraud were returned today by a federal grand jury against Bankers Capital Corporation, Eastern Bankers Corporation, American Fiduciary Corporation and Howard H. Gunder, Roland J. Randall, Everett J. Sturges and Philip Gunder Sturges, formerly State banking commissioner of Connecticut, was president of the Bankers Capital Company of Connecticut; Howard H. Gunder was chairman of the board of directors of Bankers Capital, Randall was president of the Bankers Capital; Philip Gunder is a brother of Howard and one of the directors.

The Bankers Capital failed in November with an estimated resulting loss to investors of $3,000,000 door—a great Court to protect you from tyranny and wrong. Where is it? Is it dead or does it only sleep?

There are six counts in the indictment, five of which charge the mailing of matter containing false representations as a part of an effort to dispose of securities of the Bankers Capital corporation, the other defendant corporation, and various other allied concerns.

"Where are the sons of those who before the great Washington upon their oath pledged that first "immutable principle" that they would "preserve inviolate those established rights and liberties of human nature for which they fought and bled."

"Have you no fighting men to stand forth in this hour of your country's weakness? Shall fanatic who frantically applaud the order of the coast guard "We shoot to kill" be the dictators of your destinies? Wake up, America"

NEW FREEDOM MARCH.

"And the answer came back out—and then through the far flung of the darkness—"We were already reaches of our country I heard the tramping of millions of feet following the great pageants as they passed down the streets of our cities and towns — pageants depicting the glory surrounding the birth of our great Nation intermingled with pictures of the degradation prohibition has brought to our people.

"Great liberty parades, inspiring, uplifting, enlightening, teaching us a truer patriotism, renewing our faith, awakening us to a higher ability of spirit, a truer love of our country, revealing that the armor of defense of our manhood and womanhood is efficiency, not the threat of the gun and the prison cell, showing to our people what a futile, what a dangerous, what a wicked thing it was to attempt to enforce an unenforcible, un-American, unholy law.

"They might just as well try to raise up an immovable body to resist that which is going and has ever gone out from this sacred place, the irresistible force of liberty"

CONG. SCHAFER SPEAKS

Congressman Schafer said in part

"Ten years of prohibition proves that the three stupendous outstanding peace-time problems in the history of our people are: first, oppression which resulted in the Declaration of Independence and the Revolutionary War; second, slavery which resulted in the Civil War, and third, prohibition tyranny which is destroying our institutions.

"No one can deny that 10 years of prohibition has shown that the liberty-loving American people do not respect and revere the sumptuary dry laws which embody the principles of injustice and tyranny, which have ushered in an age of corruption, intemperance, disrespect for law and contempt for government such as this nation never before witnessed.

"The American people are now spending more money for more alcoholic beverages than they ever did before prohibition. Much of the liquor consumed today is filling the insane asylums, jails and graveyards, and is doing irreparable harm to the well-being and health of this and future generations.

"We were promised that prohibition would empty the penitentiaries, but we find today almost every jail in the country filled beyond capacity and the courts congested with pending prohibition cases."

Millions of Russian Peasants Beg for Tractors, Machinery

Soviets Develop Ace of All Wheat Farms Within Two Years

By FRAZIER HUNT
European Representative for Cosmopolitan Magazine
Written specially for International News Service.

(Copyright, 1930, by International News Service, in the United States and all foreign countries. Reproduction in whole or in part prohibited.)

London, Jan. 16—A peasant boy walking a hundred miles to see a tractor and to learn how to drive it.

Squads of American tractors displacing furrows five miles long in the rich, black, virgin earth of the giant farm of the Soviets—the greatest wheat farm in the world, now barely two years old.

Millions of poor peasants flocking into collective farm units and pleading for tractors and modern machinery—a mass movement beyond belief and beyond proof.

NEW LIFE DIDN'T COME

In 1917 the 125,000,000 peasants took the land and divided it up among themselves. With their ageold land hunger satisfied they felt that they were on the verge of a new life. But it did not come. No rewards were theirs—no better homes, schools, dresses, shoes, plows, machinery—no better life. The "dark" villages, a million of them scattered over the vast reaches of mighty Russia, remained dark villages—unlit by new hopes, new ideas, education, better equipment, electricity.

They belonged to the past. They plowed and planted and reaped as their grandfather serfs had done a century before. The cities had failed them. The cities took their wheat and threw some and gave them nothing in return but words.

Then out from the golden-domed Kremlin in far away Moscow—out from the hated cities—out from America—came the idea. It blew like the strong winds that pound and sing their way across the great prairies.

NEW PROMISES

"Machinery will do it! Come together! Co-operate—bring in the tractors and modern machinery! Industrialize the land, and comforts and a decent life will be yours."

These were the new promises and the high hopes that were loosed over the Soviet land.

The State church, beautiful but inadequate, was pounded and propagandized out of existence, and in its place came the new god of machinery. And the old sacred ikon in the corner of the living room was replaced by a poster of an American tractor.

For five years now they have been building up this machine god. Salvation is promised—salvation from the hopeless, backward, ignorant past and from the hard, cruel and bitter present.

HOPE FOR RICHES

It is impossible to overestimate what the tractor alone means to these hundred million peasants. It has captured their whole imagination. It is the symbol of all machinery—and machinery is their new god.

"The tractor will give us freedom," a bearded old peasant in the south of Russia said to me. "We will work less and the tractor will plow better than we can do with horses. Machinery will free us peasants." And then with a twinkle in his wise old eye he added, "We don't have to feed the tractors in the winter time when they are not working."

Another shrewd old peasant in an adjoining village said to me, "We don't belong to the collective now, but we will pretty soon. We've seen tractors. They can plow better than we can. They'll make us all rich some day."

So it goes all over great Russia. In every village are a little group of young men who have been in the Red Army or worked in the cities and have been set

THIS is the fourth of the series of six articles on present-day Russia which Frazier Hunt, war correspondent and magazine writer, has written exclusively for International News Service. Today Hunt tells us something of what happens when 100,000,000 peasants actually go "red." The Lenin and Trotsky "intellectual" revolution of 1917, he says, was a mere scratching of the surface.

Tomorrow's article will tell of the plans for establishing "tractor centers" throughout the agricultural sections of Russia, and of eventually making these "tractor centers" the educational, social, manufacturing and government centers for the communities in which they are located. The "tractor center" is the crux of the whole "five-year plan."

on fire with the idea of collective ownership of modern machinery. They are the leaven that slowly is awakening the Red consciousness of these countless millions.

They have given the initial momentum to this great mass movement that is beginning to sweep over Soviet land, crushing all opposition, breaking down all barriers, spreading the new, the real revolution.

FORCE GOOD FARMERS OUT

In many ways it is not a pretty picture. At least five million of the best individual farmers, the most intelligent, the ablest and most necessary are being ruthlessly and consciously crushed to death.

With the failure of the cities to supply goods and comforts to the villages in return for their grain, the Russian peasant individually went on the greatest strike in all history. He simply refused to grow any more grain than he needed for himself. What was the use of a sock full of paper roubles if you couldn't buy anything with them?

And so it was the great war between the cities and the country was fought out in 1920 and 1921. The peasant won and Lenin brought in his new economic policy that permitted private trading and the more intelligent and shrewder peasant to again become a minor capitalist. He could again employ labor and loan money. He was dubbed "Kulak"—the fist.

Of course the more he prospered the more he was despised. With Lenin's death Trotzky wanted to crush him at once. Over this point, Trotzky—to many the natural heir to the imperial purple of the great Lenin—and Stalin quarrelled.

BEING MADE POORER

In the end Trotzky was exiled from Soviet Russia—and then Stalin adopted Trotzky's theory of crushing this hated Kulak—but added to it this tremendous and terrifying dream of industrializing the backward Russia land and making it a part and parcel of the whole audacious five-year industrialization plan that is to make or break the Soviets.

Today this good farmer—this hard-fisted individualistic man of the soil is being superlaxed out of his property, his horses and cattle and equipment, and he is being made poorer than the most indolent, most stupid peasant in all Russia.

He is disfranchised, all privileges are taken from him, he is stripped of his goods and wealth, his children excluded from schools and he himself refused the right to go into the collectives and co-operatives that are to replace all individual farming.

Naturally, he fights back. He burns and destroys and kills—and then he is tried before a Red people's court, and taken out and shot.

"WE MUST CRUSH"

It is a cruelly difficult to understand—this stamping out of all that is most capable among the peasantry.

"You see, we must crush this rich and powerful peasant or he will crush us," one of the leaders of the national collective movement explained to me.

Freedom and Riches Is Promised Soviets in New Era

"If we let him into our collective, even after we have stripped him of his property he will dominate the collective. He is shrewder today than the poorer peasants. We must destroy him just as we destroyed the aristocracy and bourgeoisie of the cities.

"Once he is eliminated we can march ahead with our great dream of mechanizing the country life, and in the end of making a new and free citizen of the world from this dark, illiterate peasant of today."

PEACE SHIP IN A STORM AT SEA

mediately take a train for London, arriving there about 2 p. m. Friday.

The Americans will arrive in England without having formulated definitely plans of procedure, but it is considered likely this will be discussed at the conference tomorrow of Col. Stimson and Prime Minister MacDonald.

It is the American delegation's hope that as far as possible the negotiations be directed specifically to the purpose of the conference, that is, consideration of what changes can be made in the battleship provisions of the Washington treaty and what limitations can be placed on other categories of ships.

Members of the delegation have been unwilling to comment on the possibility that other elements, such as the French suggestion of Mediterranean security pacts, may become seriously involved with these purposes.

In some of the suggestions thus far advanced, such as the Mediterranean pacts, the delegation feels it has no concern, while others hitherto discussed are not likely to gain the Americans' approval.

Anti-MacDonald Speech Wins Praise, Censure

By HARRY R. FLORY
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, Jan. 16—Mingled praise and censure followed today in the wake of the two widely divergent views on the disarmament question offered by Prime Minister J. Ramsay MacDonald and William C. Bridgeman, former First Lord of the Admiralty in the deposed cabinet of Premier Stanley Baldwin.

While Premier MacDonald, talking in an optimistic vein with foreign newspaper correspondents, urged that battleships be eliminated entirely by the naval powers of the world and cruisers drastically reduced, Bridgeman launched a bitter attack against the entire disarmament activities of the MacDonald government.

The Laborites regard Bridgeman's address as the "swan song" of the big navy men, but the Conservatives, on the other hand, seem likely to take it up as a battle cry and pit all their forces to prevent MacDonald's alleged "idealism."

Washington, Jan. 16 (AP)—A brown leather book bearing the pleas of 12,000,000 American women for armament reduction will be presented to the naval reduction conference in London the first week in February, along with the 180,000 signatures of Japanese women to a similar petition

Mrs. Edgerton Parsons of New York, treasurer of the Cause and Cure of War conference being held here, will head the delegation taking the book to London.

In the brown leather book are the resolutions passed by the conference the combined membership of which includes one-fifth of the adult women of the United States, urging drastic enough a reduction in naval armament to forever end competition in naval building. The book contains also signatures of heads of the various state delegations attending the conference.

'FIND' EIELSON IN WILDS OF SIBERIA

Moscow, Jan. 16 (AP)—A report that Carl Ben Eielson and his mechanic, Earl Borland were near the river Anguemy, Siberia, was received by the Soviet government today.

Although it was not confirmed, the Soviet authorities ordered a dog sled expedition to the place.

The Soviet Arctic commission in Moscow, which has been in charge of the Russian efforts to find the fliers, was notified that its radio station at Anadyr, Siberia, had received a report on January 14 that Eielson and Borland had landed near the river Anguemy.

This report came from Radio Operator Kyrilenko at Penkingly, who said he had received a letter dated December 30 from Cape Wellen, reporting the missing airmen.

Despite the lack of confirmation of this report, the government gave immediate instructions to Capt Malovsonov of the Soviet steamer Stavropol, now marooned in the ice near North Cape, to dispatch a dogsled expedition to the area in question and to search for the missing Americans.

Instruction also were given to the Soviet fliers Gladyshev and Slepnev, who are now in the region of Cape Providence, to join in the search by airplane. Another searching party will be dispatched from Cape Wellen. Meanwhile, the government is taking all measures to verify the report.

SHIP COLLISION SUIT FILED

New York, Jan. 16—A suit for $1,300,000, placing all the blame for the sinking of the liner Fort Victoria upon the Clyde Mallory liner Algonquin, has been brought in the federal court by the Bermuda & West Indies Steamship Company, Ltd., it was learned today.

The suit was brought to light through the filing of a motion by the Clyde-Mallory line to limit its liability in the case. The Fort Victoria was rammed and sunk by the Algonquin in the fog in Ambrose channel at the entrance to New York harbor on December 18 without loss of life.

The Bermuda & West Indies Company sued as owner of the sunken vessel, and as bailee of her cargo, engines and equipment and of the personal effects of the passengers and crew.

Holds Up Woman and Gets Glass of Water

New York, Jan. 16 (INS)—Opening the door of her mid-town apartment, Mrs. Lyndall M. Olmstead discovered a young man busily engaged in packing a suitcase with her clothing.

"Stick up your hands," he commanded, leveling an imitation revolver.

Noticing the youth's nervousness and the toy pistol, Mrs. Olmstead got him a glass of water.

Relieved, the would-be bandit sat down and poured out his troubles.

The management of the apartment, learning of the episode, notified police.

Whereupon Mrs. Olmstead, the wife of Henry Marshall Olmstead and former treasurer of the League of American Pen Women, announced that she would appear in court today and defend the 19-year-old boy.

Preliminary Trial of Travers Halted

Providence, Jan. 16 (AP)—At the joint request of U. S. Atty. Henry M. Boss, jr., and Attorney John H. Backus of Boston and Daniel T. Hagan of Providence, counsel for the defense, U. S. Commissioner Archibald C. Matteson today indefinitely postponed the preliminary trial of Charles Travers, Fairhaven, Mass., sole survivor of the shooting of the motorboat Black Duck in which three rum-runners were killed by coast guardsmen.

Travers' case was to be heard today. He is out on $10,000 bail. No reason was assigned for the postponement.

English Births Drop

London, Jan. 16 (AP)—The birthrate in England for the third quarter of 1929, as figured by the registrar-general, is the lowest in history.

FEARS PARROT HAS DREAD FEVER

Providence, Jan. 16—City and state health authorities today were preparing to examine a parrot owned by Daniel McIver of North Providence which is reported to have developed the dread parrot fever, a disease which has stricken four Providence residents recently.

Mr. McIver reported today to Dr. Charles V. Chapin, superintendent of the local health department, that the bird, which the purchased shortly before Christmas, was exhibiting symptoms of the parrot fever. Dr Chapin asked Mr. McIver to return the bird to the store where he purchased it so that it could be examined by Dr. Lester A. Round, commissioner of public health for the state of Rhode Island.

Mr. McIver said he noticed the bird acting strangely last night.

"The parrot was listless and dopey," he said. "Then, this morning, I noticed the listlessness had increased. I notified the city health authorities, and they advised me to return the parrot to the bird store.

"I do not fear there is any danger to the members of my family, but I decided to accept the warning of the health department and get rid of the bird.

"My two children have not been playing with the parrot, nor have they been near it since I bought it, so it is unlikely either will contract the malady."

The parrot which infected the four Providence residents was destroyed and the health authorities were consequently unable to make a study of the disease and its treatment and prevention. It is hoped the McIver bird will enable them to study the ailment.

A. F. of L. Backs Move to List All Aliens

St. Petersburg, Fla., Jan. 16—The American Federation of Labor has gone on record for the registration of all aliens as proposed by Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, in a move to check unemployment.

Its demands for the quota law to all countries now exempt, except Canada, with a special view to checking the inflow of Mexicans, and the stiffening of border patrols to check illegal entry into the country were reiterated.

Jail ex-Labor Head in Rum Conspiracy

St. Louis, Jan. 16 (AP)—Heber Cations, former Missouri labor commissioner and newspaper publisher, who was convicted of conspiracy to violate the Volstead act in connection with a beer grafting plot, was sentenced today by Federal Judge Charles B. Davis to serve 18 months in Leavenworth federal prison and pay a $2000 fine.

Missing Airmen Believed Found

Montreal, Jan. 16 (INE)—Pilot Cannon and Mechanic Lizotte, Canadian fliers who have been missing since October 8, were believed found today. Indians reported finding two men and an airplane near Riverseulton, 300 miles from Chicoutimi. The missing plane is the only known plane to be in Northern Quebec at this time.

CHARGE HURD "CONFESSION" IS FICTION

Portsmouth, N. H., Jan. 16—Defense Counsel Joseph D. Sullivan today characterized the alleged confession of Morris S. Hurd, charged with murdering and robbing Edworth G. Ham, aged salesman, in the latter's Market st. apartment three months ago, as "mere detective fiction, written by slick city detectives from Boston."

Hurd is now at the Rockingham County Jail in this city, held without bail.

He is due to reappear in the municipal court on Jan. 27. His attorney, Sullivan, has conferred with Atty.-Gen. Ralph W. Davis of Manchester, who will prosecute Hurd when the case comes to trial.

The accused man was formerly a hospital attendant in and around Boston.

He has twice been married. He has a wife and two children and also a daughter by a former marriage. It came to light today that as a young man he was an ardent Sunday school worker. His family also bore a good name in the vicinity.

He has an aged, widowed mother living here and a brother in Boston. His mother is the only one who has rallied to his support. Several wealthy aunts have told themselves aloof.

Asst. Atty.-Gen. Wadleigh, two days ago, requested Judge Cesar L. Young of Laconia, who is holding the present Superior Court session at Exeter, to reconvene the Grand Jury.

It was pointed out, however, that such a procedure would only mean an additional expense to the state and that the case would not be ready until Judge Young called the next session of the Grand Jury in this city, in May.

Doak Pleads Guilty to Bigamy Charge

Skowhegan, Me., Jan. 16—Chester E. Doak, of Doaktown, N. B., pleaded guilty to a charge of bigamy in western Somerset Municipal Court. He was charged with marrying Florence Young, of Concord, N. H., in this town July 27, 1929, while he had a lawful wife, Maud Sullivan Doak, in Doaktown. Doak was arrested on a complaint of the latter, who declared he left her destitute in the New Brunswick village.

His case was continued until Saturday to await action of the grand jury.

Mother Pines as Son Fears to Greet Her

Pining away in a strange land for the son she came to see but who never called for her, is breaking the heart of an elderly woman at the immigration station in East Boston.

The woman is Mrs. Marian Persigian, an Armenian, 70, who arrived in this country a month ago. She left her home for America in the belief that her son, who has been here for several years, would provide a home for her.

He would have done so, but in his desire to get his mother here he ran afoul of the law. Not being a citizen himself he persuaded a friend who was, to impersonate him and secure a preference quota certificate to enable the aged woman to gain admission.

When she arrived here the friend repudiated her and disappeared and the real son, probably fearful of the consequences and the possibility that he would have to face charges, likewise failed to come forward.

Mrs. Persigian has been disconsolate and so affected by her condition that she is worrying herself sick.

Tie Watchman, Steal $100,000 Furs

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Furs, the value of which was unofficially reported to be more than $100,000, were stolen early today by four burglars who first bound up George Woods, night watchman of the New York Auction Company in W. 26th st., and locked him in a washroom. Woods freed himself two hours after the robbers had gone and called the police. The four were armed and masked he said.

Vanderbilt's Bride and Mother Speak in R. I. Senate

Providence, Jan. 16 (AP)—For the first time in the history of the Old Royal Colony and State of Rhode Island, women addressed a session of the State Senate from the rostrum.

Mrs. Paul FitzSimon of Newport and Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, the former Miss Anne Cohy of Llewellyn Park, N. J., mother and bride respectively of the State Senator from Portsmouth, were the speakers. It is customary for the Senate to adjourn or recess when receiving guests, but this was not done when the Senators welcomed their colleague and his bride.

FIVE THEATERS WILL HELP TROY BENEFIT FUND

Woman Offers $1000 as Rum Fine; Faints When Jailed

A Wonderful Love Story by Author of 'Hollywood Girl,' 'Easy.'

What Has Happened Before

Armed with happiness, love and youth, Tom Nicholson and Lovejoy Mason are married. Tom's salary is small. They take a tiny flat. For two years before the marriage Tom had been jealous of Steve Oglesby, rich and handsome bachelor. Downtown with her friend, Norrie Shane, Lovejoy meets Steve. Although Norrie refuses, Lovejoy goes alone to lunch with him. She sees Tom in the hotel. Frightened, she starts to leave. Tom's eyes are on her. Norrie Shane's arrival saves Lovejoy. In September Tom and Lovejoy move to a suburb. When Thomas, Jr., is born, a neighbor, Mrs. Alice Alderson, calls. Lovejoy is impressed by her smart appearance, but Norrie Shane, now the baby's nurse, thinks she is a fake and a fortuneseeker.

Now Go On With the Story

(FILLMORE)

LOVEJOY did not see Mrs. Alderson again for more than two months.

Then, on the afternoon of the third Saturday in November—her first wedding anniversary—the front door bell rang. And looking through the cream-colored net curtains of her living-room, Lovejoy saw her beautiful neighbor standing on the porch.

Beside her, looking for all the world like a gargoyle, stood a huge police dog with cocked ears and a most ferocious look.

"Heavens, I hope she doesn't expect to bring that horror into the house with her!" Lovejoy thought, turning down the cuffs of her house dress.

And she flew to close the door of the baby's room before she let Mrs Alderson into the house.

The dog came in with her.

Say, how do you do to the lady Don." Mrs. Alderson spoke to it. "And then lie down like a good beauty."

She dropped down into a chair, looking like a fashion-plate, in her brown velvet dress and hat. The dog stretched himself at her brown suede feet.

"His name is Don Ce-Sar," she said, "and he's a perfect darling . . . How's your baby?"

Lovejoy hated to hear her speak of the dog and the baby in one breath like that. But she was always glad to tell people about Thomas Junior.

"He's wonderfully well, and as strong as a lion be," she answered quickly.

"He keeps you pretty busy, doesn't he?" Mrs. Alderson interrupted. "I often see you out in your yard hanging out his little clothes. You do all your own work, too, don't you? All your housework, I mean."

Lovejoy nodded her bright head.

"I do everything but my husband's shirts and collars. I send those to the laundry to be done up," she said, flushing a little. . . . Somehow or other it made her feel ashamed to confess to this gay and glittering woman that she had to do all of her own work. It made her feel poverty-stricken and second-rate.

"But it's really easy," she hurried on to explain. "The house is so tiny, and the baby sleeps so much of the time."

The words were hardly out of her mouth before the sound of the baby crying startled her. She jumped up from her chair.

Before she reached the door of the room the telephone rang.

Lovejoy stopped long enough to answer. The wire brought the sound of a strange voice, a man's. Lovejoy, worried over the baby, blurted out: "Who are you?" There was no reply.

"I'll answer it for you," said Mrs. Alderson. "You go to the baby."

Two minutes later, after Lovejoy had given the baby a drink of water, she came back to the room to find Mrs. Alderson sitting in her chair once more, smoking a cigarette. There was a large white box on her lap.

"It was the wrong number," she said. "But while you were gone a box brought this here for you."

With shining eyes and lips that curved up in a soft little smile, Lovejoy opened the box. It was a florist's box, of course, and it was filled with pink and white camellias.

"It's our first wedding anniversary—Tom's and mine," she said, touching the lovely things with her fingers.

Then she opened the little envelope that was tied to them and read what Tom had written on the card inside it:

"For the most beautiful wife in all the world."

She looked at it tenderly for a second. Then suddenly she lifted her face and began to sniff the air . . . From the kitchen came the unmistakable smell of burning cake.

"Oh, my hat," she cried, and dropped the box in Mrs. Alderson's lap. "That's my cake—you'll pardon me."

With one swift movement she was out of the room and into the little kitchen.

The cake—three layers of it—was burned beyond all hope of saving. Groaning to herself over the waste of time and work and money, Lovejoy pulled the three blackened pans out of the oven and banged them down upon the drain-board.

Mrs. Alderson was on her feet ready to go, when she came back into the room.

"I've made you spoil your baking, coming in this way when you were busy," she said, all regret and apology. "And I'm so sorry . . .

THEATERS TO AID FAMILY OF TROY

Benefit Performances to Be Given for Wife and Children of the Officer

The management of five Boston theaters has made offers which will materially swell the fund for the widow and four young children of Patrolman James J. Troy, who was shot and killed while attempting to make an arrest.

The latest of these offers comes from Jacob Lourie, general manager of the New England Theaters Operating Corporation, who has arranged for a midnight benefit performance at the Central Sq., East Boston Theater next Thursday night.

A benefit will be given at the Broadway Theater, South Boston, at midnight, Jan. 24, by C. Wesley Fraser of the Radio & Vaudeville Exchange, in conjunction with the management of the theater. The performances will begin at 11 15. Among the artists who have already donated their services are Gertrude Reese, vocalist, a former South Boston girl, and Nina Caponi, a vocalist.

A benefit performance of "The Fortune Teller," in which Eleanor Painter is featured, will be given at Majestic Theater Monday through the courtesy of Boston Victor Herbert Festival committee. All receipts in excess of the actual cost of the premiere performance of the light opera will be turned over to the fund for the Troy family.

REGULAR PRICES

Although there will be no advance over the box office prices established for the cycle, 50 cents to $2.50, Mr. Shubert has authorized his Boston manager to buy for him the first pair of seats at $25.

Miss Eleanor Painter, the star, has telegraphed a similar authorization, and the management states that any who wish to contribute to the fund through paying an extra price for boxes are privileged to do so and acknowledgement of their contributions will be made through the press. Subscribers' certificates will be recognized as usual.

It was also announced by the Park Amusement Co., that Friday's total receipts at the Park Theater in Washington st. will be donated to the Troy fund.

Over in East Boston Manager Arthur Soule, of the Seville Theater has agreed to run a midnight show two weeks from Thursday night the proceeds to go to the same fund. Soule made the announcement of the midnight show today after a long conference with officials of the Keith-Albee Theater Corp., which has promised to send acts enough to keep the customers inside the Seville Theater for four hours.

In South Boston Representative Lee Durgin who is assisting Bennett in his drive was preparing today to call upon a group of South Boston business men and complete arrangements for a benefit theater performance in the peninsula district.

It seems as though all the residents of Massachusetts are preparing to get behind Joseph W. Bennett, of Orleans st., East Boston, and lend him their efforts to raise a sizable fund for the benefit of the family of Officer Troy.

After a conference with Capt. Martin King of South Boston and Capt. Archibald Campbell of East Boston, Bennett today announced that Joseph L. McNamara, head of the South Boston branch of the Federal National Co., had agreed to take charge of the funds.

OFFICER PRAISED

"I know of no better charity to give to than a fund of this kind," McNamara said. "I was personally acquainted with Officer Troy ever since he came over to Athens st. police station. I knew him as an honest, upright and straight forward police officer.

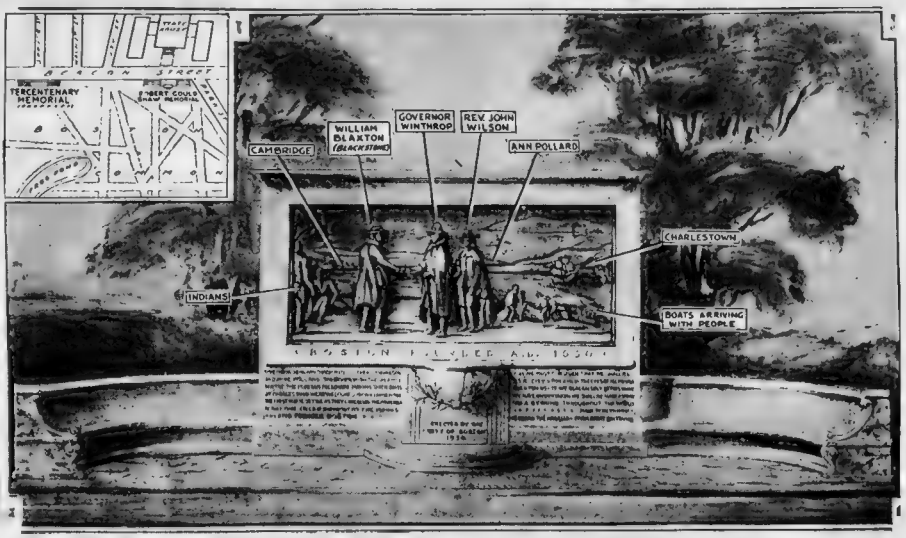
"I hope that the people of Boston and all Massachusetts will help to swell this fund. I know of no charity that is more worthy."

A few hours after Bennett announced the opening of his campaign for funds several letters arrived at his office marked "for the Troy fund." On Wednesday more than a dozen letters were received.

These letters will be opened today and the names of contributors and amounts will be listed and published in the Boston Evening American tomorrow.

Persons who wish to donate money to the Troy fund can send donations either to Bennett at 136 Orleans st., East Boston, or to James L. McNamara at the Federal Trust Co., South Boston.

Proposed Memorial Graphically Depicts Founding of Boston



This design by John Francis Paramino, Boston sculptor, has been suggested as a permanent memorial of the city for the tercentenary celebration, and has the approval of Mayor Curley's committee on marking of historical sites. The proposed location is on Boston Common, where William Blaxton, first white settler, had his crude hut. The bas-relief represents the founding of the city through Governor Winthrop, accompanied by the Rev. John Wilson and little Anne Pollard, first of her sex to set foot on the peninsula. Blaxton is greeting the newcomers, who have come over from Charlestown because of lack of drinking water there. The proposed memorial would cost $35,000. Map shows where it would be situated.

CAT WHICH BIT 3 HAD RABIES

A stray cat that attacked half a dozen persons in Point Shirley during the past week, has been found to have been suffering from rabies according to a report received from the State Board of Health by the Winthrop police yesterday.

Of the several persons attacked by the cat, including two women and several men, Miss Evelyn Farrell, 22, of Preble ave, appeared to have been most severely injured.

Another woman was set upon by the cat, and she beat the animal off with a stick, but not until after she had received several scratches. Charles Wheaton, operator of the bus between the Point and Winthrop Beach, was also attacked, but he wore leather gaiters and was unhurt.

Church Film Critics 'Silly,' Says Pastor

Selection of the Sunday evening motion pictures shown in the First M. E Church of Lynn was defended by the pastor, Rev Edson R Leach.

His stand was taken after Mayor J Fred Manning announced that a complaint was received declaring that certain features of the film, "Saul and His Son," shown at the church recently were very objectionable, particularly when shown in churches.

"Perfect silly," the pastor replied. Another development in the Lynn movie war instigated by Mayor Manning was the announcement of the Ancient Order of Hibernians that a member would interview the mayor today for the purpose of having a representative of the organization placed on a board of censors.

This is requested so that any burlesque of the Irish race or reflections cast upon Irishmen could be removed from a film, or such film banned.

Curley to Limit Damage Awards

Mayor Curley served notice on the city law department that large cash awards from the city treasury to motorists and other complainants for damages resulting from alleged defects in the highways will have to stop.

Automobilists who break a spring while motoring over the trenches of Beacon Hill will be paid for a broken spring—and no more. And pedestrians who seek $5000 for stumbling over an upturned brick in a city sidewalk will have to tell it to the judge and jury.

Ticket Office in Hub Opens Jan. 20

The Central Vermont Railway in connection with the Grand Trunk and Canadian National Railways will open a new ticket office in Boston on January 20.

This office will be located at Tremont and Boylston sts. It will occupy the ground floor of the Masonic Building, with entrance on Tremont st., and with six large display windows along the two streets, ducted.

Jewish Labor to Aid Campaign for Funds

A conference of representatives of all of the Greater Boston Jewish labor organizations and fraternal orders will take place at the Elks Hotel, Sunday afternoon, at 2 30 o'clock, for the purpose of organizing a people's committee of the Associated Jewish Philanthropies to further the $900,000 campaign for funds now being con-

STATUES TO BE PLACED IN PARK

Two statue groups that formerly graced the old downtown postoffice will be erected in Franklin Park, according to plans submitted to Mayor Curley by Park Comm William P Long.

The statutes will stand on bases 15 feet high facing the circle on Perpont rd., between the rose garden and the bird house.

The two pieces are named "Science" and "Labor," and are the work of Daniel Chester French. They were placed on the old postoffice a half-century ago. Each is about 17 feet high and weighs several tons.

HUB FOUNDING DEPICTED

A memorial depicting the founding of Boston and commemorating the arrival of Governor John Winthrop to receive a welcome from William Blaxton (Blackstone) the first settler, has been suggested to Mayor Curley as appropriate for inclusion in the tercentenary plans by John Francis Paramino, Boston sculptor.

At a cost of $35,000, his memorial can be erected on the Beacon st. boundary of the Common, on the exact spot where Blaxton had his first hut. The location is opposite 50 Beacon st.

Paramino has designed a bas-relief representing the founding of Boston by Gov. Winthrop, who was accompanied by the Rev John Wilson and Ann Pollard, the first white girl to set foot on the peninsula. The scene shows Blaxton greeting the newcomers, who left their first settlement at Charlestown on account of the lack of good drinking water.

Student Honored

For the first time in the history of the German Club at Boston University College of Liberal Arts an officer has been chosen to serve a second term. Judith Brass of Lawrence has been re-elected president.

MOTHER OF 5 IS GIVEN 18 MONTHS

Judge Advises Her to Use Money to Hire Nurse for Children While Away

When Mrs. Pearl Kushnits, of Suffolk st., Malden, mother of five children offered to pay a fine of $1000 in lieu of a jail sentence Judge James A. Lowell, in U. S. District Court today told her to use the money for a nurse to care for her youngsters while she is away.

A moment later Judge Lowell imposed an 18-months jail sentence on Mrs. Kusnitz, whose screams, when sentenced, re-echoed through the court house until she collapsed in a faint. She had to be assisted into an ante-room for treatment by a physician.

With her husband, Harry Kusnitz, the woman had previously pleaded guilty to charges of illegal manufacturing and possession of liquor. She appeared in court today for disposition of her case.

When Mrs Kusnitz's case was called Asst. U. S. Atty. Stone described the woman as a flagrant violator of the liquor law. He said her activities had dated back eight years and that through various technicalities she had escaped punishment.

He said five stills and a large amount of liquor had been seized at her home. He added that Mrs. Kusnitz had openly boasted in Malden that she was being protected by the law enforcement officers.

Continuing his plea for a jail term, Attorney Stone said the woman's activities were a menace to her children. He said that on one occasion the lives of the entire family were nearly snuffed out by a still explosion at the Kusnitz home and that the children were rescued from the flames by firemen.

The woman's husband was given a two-year suspended sentence and placed upon probation.

Mrs. Rebecca Gold of Upham st., Malden, mother of three children, was before Judge Lowell for sentence on the charge of illegal manufacture and possession of liquor. She was given a suspended sentence of 18 months in Plymouth Jail and fined $350. She paid the fine.

GOODWIN WARNS INSURANCE MEN THEY WILL LOSE 'GOLDEN EGGS'

CALLS RATES IN THIS CITY EXORBITANT

Declares Situation Demands Cut in the Cost; Hits Investigation

"The insurance hogs must be satisfied with less or they will kill the goose that lays the golden eggs."

This is how Frank A. Goodwin, Finance Commission chairman, characterized alleged practices of certain Boston insurance men at a luncheon today of the Fire Broker Board of the Real Estate Exchange.

Chairman Goodwin's subject was "Valuation in Land Takings."

"You real estate owners," said Mr. Goodwin, "will get a cut in insurance only when you fight for it."

RATES "EXORBITANT"

Mr. Goodwin said that "in the opinion of every one except insurance people" the charges of fire insurance on property "are exorbitant."

Speaking of an investigation made by the National Fire Protection Association, the finance commission chairman said he considered their report "nothing but a fake and a camouflage."

"How convenient to have this matter investigated by the fire insurance companies themselves," exclaimed Mr. Goodwin

In this report, he pointed out, the companies "admit that the fire losses in Boston have decreased 30 per cent in the last two years."

"This ought to indicate that there ought to be a reduction in rates," said Mr. Goodwin.

"RAP" FOR BOSTON

Mr. Goodwin said that the principal argument advanced against a Boston reduction is that this city is paying no less than other cities with equal fire losses.

"In other words," sarcastically commented Goodwin, "as long as they can get away with exorbitant rates in other cities throughout the country, Boston must also take the rap."

Goodwin said the figures in the insurance commissioner's report of past three years show "illuminating" facts.

The amount of money taken from real estate owners was $118,354,296 for premiums, but the actual fire losses paid out, according to Goodwin's quotation from the reports, was $57,022,689.

The finance commission chairman also devoted considerable attention to high taxes. One of his main points was that the cost of running the school system has increased "out of all proportion."

According to Mr. Goodwin, the school student population increased 20 per cent in 20 years, but the cost of running the schools increased 285 per cent.

AND NOW, WHAT?

"What are you going to do about it?" he asked.

A demand for an investigation of Boston schools was urged by Goodwin, who said:

"What we need in Boston is some one with nerve enough to investigate the administration of the schools, who will not be frightened by the cry that you can't investigate the schools except by having it done by educators. The only result that can be obtained from an investigation of our educational facilities by educators is a whitewash, and if any recommendations are made at all, they are bound to be that we spend more money for feds, frills and fancies."

In discussing "exorbitant payments exacted from the city in land damage cases," Mr. Goodwin made passing reference to the Exchange St. widening case.

His comment on this was:

"Whatever may be said of the Exchange St. investigation by the Finance Commission, it at least did one thing. It brought forcibly to the mind of the people of this city that real estate experts could not be depended upon and that, as a result, the city was being constantly milked out of hundreds of thousands of dollars. The effect of this publicity has been shown in two recent cases so far as juries are concerned, but appparently it has not had the same effect on real estate experts."

Hospitals Benefit in Mrs. Hunt's Will

After bequests of $50,000 to relatives and friends, the will of Mrs. Emma P. Hunt of 461 Walnut ave., Brookline, filed today in Dedham, left the residue of her estate in equal parts to the Boston Floating Hospital, Lend-a-Hand Society and Massachusetts General Hospital.

As no bond was filed the extent of the residue is not made public but it is believed to be considerable.

Old Boston in Pictures—No. 158

THE STATE HOUSE and surroundings in 1812, viewed from a point on the Common near the gate opening onto Charles st. The two-and-one-half-story building screened by trees and, in turn, partially screening the State House, was the residence of John Hancock, first signer of the Declaration of Independence. It stood until 1863. The cornerstone of the State House was laid in 1795, Paul Revere conducting the Masonic ceremonies and Governor Samuel Adams delivering the oration. More pictures of Old Boston will be printed in the Boston Evening American.

Coast Guard Boat in Race Against Death

On a 70-mile dash through heavy seas, the Coast Guard patrol boat Agassiz was ordered on a race against death today when division headquarters at the Customs House was notified that a fisherman was seriously sick aboard the trawler Ripple, out on the fishing grounds.

The Ripple was 150 miles off Cap Cod when her skipper, Captain Thomas, flashed the call for help. The message failed to state the name of the stricken man but said he needed immediate hospital attention.

Acting Division Commander H R. Searles flashed orders to the Agassiz, 70 miles from the Ripple's position, sending her full speed ahead to pick up the man and race for the port.

The Agassiz was expected to make contact late today. Her trip to the vessel was figured at five to seven hours.

ODD YACHT IS LAUNCHED

Without the formality of a sponsor, because her owner doesn't relish formality, the 50-foot motor and sailing yacht Walrus, which cost $30,000, was launched today at Lawley's shipyards, Neponset.

She presented an odd but pretty sight as she took to the water, her construction being widely different from the general run of similar craft. She is of the twin screw auxiliary power-boat type, ketch-rigged and fitted for all-winter fishing.

Charles Welch, commodore of the Eastern yach club at Marblehead and owner of the craft, was present at the launching. The more noticeable difference between the Walrus and craft of her size is a pilot house amidships. Forward of the pilot house, below deck, is a comfortable cabin, fitted out with a stove and all the comforts of home.

CURLEY CURBS DAMAMGE SUITS

From now on owners of real estate taken for public improvements by the city will not be permitted to receive "pro tanto" settlements, Mayor Curley announced today. Said the mayor

"Owners should not be allowed to receive the money awarded by the street commissioners and use it for the purpose of carrying on litigation against the city."

"Where an award is taken pro tanto, if a trial is then had before a jury, if it should be determined by the jury that the damages sufficiently exceed the award as the amount already paid to the owner, there is no way of recovering the excess from the owner."

Clear Site for New Telephone Exchange

Work was begun today in Bowdoin sq. to clear the site of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Co.'s proposed $2,000,000 West End telephone exchange. Wrecking crews have started to demolish the old Coolidge Hotel, later known as the St. James and the Majestic, built more than 100 years ago. Adjacent buildings will be shored.

In the spring the telephone company will begin construction of a 16-story building which will serve Capitol, Haymarket, Bowdoin, Richmond and Blackstone exchanges. They will be connected from manual to dial operation.

MARSINO WINS HIS FREEDOM

Freed under a habeas corpus writ issued today by a United States district justice, Joseph B Marsino, Warren bank wrecker, has won the first step in his five-year fight for freedom.

Marsino, who has half of his four to five-year state prison sentence to serve for an offense which sent him to Atlanta for four years, will have temporary freedom for the present.

Judge Brewster granted the writ of release from state prison, but will have temporary freedom for the present.

As the State official was absent from his office today, the decision to fight the writ has not been reached.

Marsino's freedom will be given him as soon as the execution of the writ is made upon Warden Hogsett, to whom the writ is directed, it is learned. Before his ultimate freedom from State prison, he still faces a two-year term in a Worcester County jail as a result of the bank crash

Nurse Begins Fight for Her Diploma

Hearings began today before Richard M. Walsh, master, to determine whether Miss Jane Brush shall obtain a diploma as a graduate nurse of Framingham Union Hospital from S W. Van Ness, president, and Ruth I Humphreys secretary.

She says she obtained a diploma signed by Van Ness and a graduation pin from Miss Humphreys, but has been unable to get the diploma back since she handed it to Miss Humphrey for her signature.

Zero Weather on the Way to Boston

The coldest weather of the season for Boston is on the way from the Canadian Northwest and will reach here during the next 48 hours or 72 hours, sending the mercury to zero, according to the official forecaster. Temperatures will begin to tumble tonight, he said.

The effect of this frigid blast was already felt over the American West and Northwest early today. At Havre, Mont., it was 30 below today. It was 42 below at Edmonton, Alberta, and 40 below at Prince Albert, Sask., and The Pas, Man.

It was 34 above in Boston at 7 a. m. today The lowest in New England was 24 below at Burlington Vt. Possible snow flurries for Boston today were predicted.

Police Uniforms to Be Made in Boston

Hereafter the uniforms of the members of the police department will be made by a local concern.

Mayor Curley today announced that following a conference with Police Commissioner Wilson, which was held at the request of the Boston Central Labor Union at City Hall, it was decided that in the future preference would be given to local houses.

Heretofore the uniforms of the policemen have been made in Philadelphia. The mayor believes that there are plenty of tailors in Boston who would be glad to get the work and also that they could manufacture just as well as any Philadelphia tailor.

JUDGES OPPOSE HARSHER LAW ON DEBTORS

Judge Murray Speaks at the Hearing Before Legislative Committee on Judiciary

Judge Michael J. Murray speaking for himself and the other justices of the municipal court, today scored petitioners for legislation to tighten up the poor debtor law at a hearing before the legislative committee on judiciary.

He saw in the suggested changes, or reversion to the old law repealed in 1927, a condition "where pigeonholed capiases are held as a club over debtors."

On one bill which would cause the arest of a debtor after a summons, the judge said: "I always want to be sure of not dragging in some innocent person to the court."

He condemned another petition which would make contempt proceedings mandatory instead of leaving it to the discretion of the court. "There has been many a man who has been hard up of late years," he said, "I think he should be given a chance to work out his own salvation."

The petitioners for the change contended that the old law assured speedier hearings and greater satisfaction on judgments. The courts were accused of being too lenient in regard to contempt proceedings.

Rep. James W. MacLeod of Chelsea, arguing for a change in the law, reminded the committee that the prosperity of the country is bound up in the credit system, and that it must fall unless better protected.

MAYOR INVITES LOMASNEY

It's a safe bet that it is a good many years since Martin J. Lomasney has wended his way into the mayor's office at City Hall, but he will receive an invitation to be present at a conference to be held in the office of Mayor Curley on Monday to discuss the future improvements of the Charles river basin.

The mayor announced he had also invited Mrs. James J. Storrow and members of the finance commission, city council, Park Commission, City Planning Board, Street Commission, metropolitan planning division and corporation counsel.

The co-operation of the municipality in the improvement of the Charles river basin, which will be conducted by the Metropolitan District Commission this year and for which Mrs. Storrow has contributed $1,000,000, will be the principal topic to be discussed.

Oppose Automatic Signal at Crossing

The proposal of the Boston & Maine Railroad to substitute automatic double-flash signals for the present gate tender at the Humphrey st. grade crossing in Swampscott was opposed at a hearing today before the Public Utilities Commission by residents of that town.

Town Counsel L. D. Linscott argued that the change would increase the danger to school children who use the crossing.

Leave to Withdraw on Labor Pensions

Leave to withdraw on a bill to give cities and towns authority to increase the amount of payments to retired laborers was reported today by the legislative committee on pensions. Representatives Daniel J. Coakley of Chicopee, Dennis J. McCarthy of Cambridge and John V. Mahoney of Boston dissented. The petitioner for the legislation was John J. Irwin of Medford.

Dr. O'Brien to Head Mattapan Hospital

Dr. John F. O'Brien of Charlestown was today appointed to serve as assistant superintendent of the Boston City Hospital, in charge of the Boston Sanatorium at Mattapan, to take the place of the late Dr. Arthur White, Mayor Curley announced today.

Teacher-Mayor Tells Why

Mayor O'Neill Henry B. Mills

Mayor O'Neill of Everett was a school master. Henry B. Mills, Boston American office boy, wondered how come a school master should want to be mayor. So Henry went and asked him and they are pictured above in an interview in the mayor's office. His honor told Henry the whys and wherefores of his political venture. (Staff photo.)

This Mayor O'Neill Is a Regular Feller

By HENRY B. MILLS
Boston American Office Boy

Everett school kids are both lucky and unlucky.

They've lost a sub-master at the high school who was a regular fellow but they've got him working for them in the mayor's chair.

I guess almost everybody has wondered how come Everett should elect a school teacher to be mayor and how come a school teacher should run for mayor in the first place.

So while all this interviewing of new mayors was going on I decided to go out and have a talk with Mayor Michael G. O'Neill and find out And I found out. He didn't want to tell at first.

"Why did you give up teaching for politics?" I asked him.

He sat there for a long time with his hand over his eyes and I began to think he hadn't got me or that he wasn't going to answer.

TOO MUCH POLITICS

Finally he said: "I gave up teaching because I thought that the school department was involved in politics."

So I guess that's the answer to both questions, how come he ran, and how come he was elected, feeling like he could set things right if a fellow who knew about the schools got into the job and made the politicians step around. The men and women who you agreed with him, the results show

If I was going back to school again I'd like to go in Everett because the kids out there are still going to get the best break in the world from Mayor O'Neill whether he's the sub-master or the mayor or just an ordinary citizen

He's a big fellow and I bet he can use his dukes I walked into his office and started to shoot questions at him and he said: "Say, young fellow me lad, why don't you introduce yourself?"

So I said 'This is Henry Mills of the Boston American, Mayor O'Neill. Henry meet the mayor.' And we shook hands.

He's got eyes that twinkle even when he's not smiling and I guess the kids in school weren't afraid to talk to him.

NO "POLS" IN SCHOOL

I shot my questions at him about his running for mayor and he informed me one thing he was going to see was that the "pols" weren't going to run the school department.

"What else are you going to do to make Everett a better city?" I asked.

"Chief Hill of the police department is going to be the chief," he said, and he didn't add to it. being a school teacher, but I knew he meant "and I don't mean maybe."

"All heads of the other city departments are going to be the heads in every sense of the word, if they are capable, and if they aren't capable they are going to get out."

The mayor is going to have a lot of marsh land that they are using for dumps filled in for places for factory buildings because industries pay Everett $9,000,000 a year now, and that is a lot of money

"Also," he said, "I am going to see that the junior high school gets a new addition and I hope for a new hospital and a new city hall There is a new liquor squad and the bootleggers are going to be cleaned up. Watch the papers. We had six cases in court this week."

A REGULAR GUY

Here's more proof he's a regular guy. I asked him what sports he liked best and he said football and boxing Regular guys like those sports. He played football on the Harvard second team and admits he was never good enough for the first, which also makes him a regular guy because if he had me he taught Barry Ward all he knows I'd have believed him.

He said something funny about fights. Maybe it's funny and maybe it isn't. He said he doesn't like professional bouts any more because money controls the fights. I'll have to ask me, he means some of the big fights are what they call "in the bag."

Then he sprang a big surprise. "I'm going to see if Everett can't get together with Malden and Somerville and lay out a municipal airport

AIRSHIP ERA IS SEEN IN NEAR FUTURE

P. Litchfeild Speaks at Luncheon in His Honor at Chamber of Commerce

"The entire United States is vulnerable to air attack now that aircraft has been developed for military use," stated P. W. Litchfield of Akron, O., head of the country's only dirigible plant, at a luncheon tendered in his honor at the Chamber of Commerce this noon

In addition to this announcement, Litchfield also pointed out that the airship, or rigid dirigible, will take its place over all other forms of ocean travel before many years, and that the United States would be in the front rank of this development.

"The last quarter of a century has given to the world an entirely new form of transportation," stated Litchfield, "a form of travel that takes us off the earth and water and into the third dimension, the air. We may soon be enabled to make a continuous journey from any point on the west coast to Australia or the Orient in about the same time as it now takes to go to Europe by boat."

Litchfield remarked that his company was constructing two dirigibles for the U. S. Navy, which, when they are finished, will be the largest in the world, three times as large as the Los Angeles and twice as large as the Graf Zeppelin.

DETECTIVES IN JEWEL HUNT

J. L. Simon, wealthy Salem man and prominent in Republican party affairs, today declared that his total replacement value of jewels stolen from his home would be $24,000. This was in correction of an estimate of $50,000 which had replaced an earlier estimate of $36,000.

He explained that through an error a bracelet valued at $825 had been listed as worth $5500, and a ring which his wife had mislaid had also been included in the stolen jewels. This ring was later found.

Three Pinkerton detectives, at the behest of the insurance companies holding policies covering the gems, were added to the force of investigators today. They will not be assumed charge of the hunt for the thieves.

The most likely clue on which the investigators based their case failed to stand up. This was the Napoleon Hotel in Somerville in the Simon home on Lafayette st may have been involved.

Girl Asks Mayor Murphy for Right to Sell Liquor

An attractive brunette appeared at the office of Mayor John J. Murphy in Somerville today and pleaded with him for a license to sell liquor.

When Mayor Murphy informed her it would be impossible to grant her request, she said: "Well, Mr. Mayor, can't you fix it up with Capt. Charles J. Sharry, the liquor squad, and tell him to ignore my place."

Mayor Murphy assured her that Capt. Sharry was in his position to enforce the liquor law and would do so.

FATHER WINS ALL-NIGHT RACE WITH DEATH OVER SEA AND LAND

SPEEDS HOME FROM JOB AT LIGHTSHIP

Dying Child May Recover; Baby of Family Died During Father's Absence

Aided by a Coast Guard patrol boat and a sympathetic truck driver, Joseph Roderick, fireman on the Great Shoals lightship, off Nantucket, won a race with death to the bedside of his child in Somerville just as dawn broke today.

But he was too late to look upon the body of his nine-month-old son, James, whose funeral took place even before he learned that death hovered over his two-year-old son, Herbert.

A Coast Guard patrol boat from Base 18, at Woods Hole, hove to alongside the lightship after Bob Emery of radio station WEEI put on the air an appeal to ships in the vicinity to carry the sad news.

Roderick watched the approach of the patrol boat with fear in his heart for when he had left his home on January 6, the baby was seriously ill with pneumonia.

FATHER TELLS OF RACE

"I had just come off watch," the father said at his home today, "and had gone below to get a few hours sleep, but I couldn't close my eyes. I kept thinking about the children and wishing I could get some news of them.

"About 4 o'clock I looked out of a porthole and several miles away I could see the patrol boat plowing through a heavy sea. She was headed toward us and I wondered what her purpose was for they rarely come within hailing distance.

Then suddenly I thought that something had gone wrong at home. I ran up to the skipper and told him of the patrol boat. I asked him if I should put a ladder over the side. The closer the boat came the more certain I felt that it was carrying bad news for me.

"Then she hailed us and asked for me, saying that there had been a death in my family and a second child was dying, and offering to stand by and take me ashore.

"The sea was pretty rough and it was quite a while before I could board the patrol boat. The fellows in the crew were very decent to me and raced the ship to Hyannis as fast as she'd go.

STRUGGLE TO LAND.

"They had to put out a small boat in the low tide and it was a struggle of a half-hour before we could land. It was dark by the time I landed on a little wharf about five miles below Hyannis.

"I headed for a light in a house about a mile away and there I talked with a man who gave me directions for reaching the depot at Hyannis.

"But when I arrived there I found the last train had left, so I had to plan on spending the night in a lunchroom. About midnight a man whom I had become acquainted with stopped a truck driver bound for Boston and he took me as far as Quincy.

"I reached my home at daybreak. The baby's bed was empty. I was too late to see him even in death, but I was in time to hear death to my other child, and now the doctors say he has a good chance of getting well."

There are five children in the Roderick family: Joe, 12; Mary, 9; Jessie, 7; Edward, 4, and the sick child, Herbert.

PARENTS END ROMANCE OF CHILDREN

Medford Schoolgirl, 16, Took Out Intentions to Wed Newsboy

The romance of a 16-year-old Medford Junior high school girl and a 15-year-old Medford newsboy that was to have resulted in their early marriage, is today broken or at least badly bent.

The girl student filed marriage intentions at Medford City Hall. She is Miss Helen M. Smith of Governors rd., Medford, who, according to the authorities, gave her age as 18 when the intentions were filed. The newsboy whose name she entered on the intentions is Robert I. M. Belvin of Governors ave., Medford. Miss Smith gave his age as alleged as 21 at the time.

The couple had carefully concealed their plans to be wedded, had taken every precaution to prevent any news from reaching their parents, and had planned to remain with their families for some time after the ceremony.

Parents of the boy, upon learning of the filing of the intentions, hurried to the Medford City Hall and had them cancelled. Meanwhile the young girl reiterated her affection for the newsboy and promised to wait until she is of age, at which time, she emphatically stated, she would marry the "boy of her dreams."

As a result of the filing of the marriage intentions of the girl and also giving of the wrong ages, an investigation was ordered by Assistant City Clerk Miss Mary M. Blake. The marriage license itself was to have been sent to the girl resident in a few days, it was learned.

Miss Smith, who is a pianist, and a radio performer, is said to have admitted that she filed the intentions. It is said that the only reason she did not tell her friends of her plans was because she felt that her parents and the parents of the newsboy would object, and that was the secret got out the plan would be off.

JAPANESE PAY VISIT TO THE CARDINAL

Sewada Sees Destinies of the U. S. and His Own Country in Pacific Ocean

Cardinal O'Connell today received a visit from Setsuzo Sewada, Japanese consul in New York. The consul was accompanied by his wife and Charles D. McGinnis and Timothy Walsh, architects, who designed many of the buildings of Boston College.

Later Consul Sewada called on former Gov. Channing H. Cox and expressed appreciation of Cox's services as honorary Japanese consul in Boston, from which position he recently retired.

Mme. Sewada was entertained at luncheon by Rose L. Dexter of Beacon st., while her husband lunched with Arthur S. Johnson at the Union Club. Mr. and Mrs. Sewada will dine tonight at the home of Courtenay L. Crocker. The consul spoke of the importance of Pacific affairs in an address before the Japan Society.

"The focus of world affairs is being more and more directed upon the borders of the Pacific and the United States and Japan, once apprehensive of each other's growing power are destined to play mutual roles of great importance," he said.

"The age of the Pacific has dawned and the great world dream which consists in the gradual unfolding of human destinies is now being played in that region. To promote peace and happiness among nations living on its borders is the common heritage of our two countries."

Hub Chamber Talks on Phone to Berlin

Development of the transatlantic radio telephone service for commercial purposes was forcefully exemplified today by a telephone conversation between the Boston Chamber of Commerce and a firm in Germany that had requested the chamber to give it information on the automatic telegraph printer, known as the teletype, now on the market in this country.

The Berlin firm, Lowenstein & Hecht, had read a description of the machine in a copy of Boston Business, the chamber's monthly publication, and wrote for further information.

Today a phone call was put through to Germany by Franklin E. Bancroft, advertising manager of Boston Business. This meant arrangement of trunk lines from Boston to New York and the radio broadcasting station on Long Island.

On the other side of the Atlantic the voice was picked up by land lines and relayed via the British Isles to Berlin.

The voice from the German end of the conversation took a somewhat different route, being picked up by the radio receiving station at Houlton, Me., thence coming to Boston.

Publicity Needed to Fight Disease

The newspaper is a valuable agency in combating the spread of contagious disease, Dr. Clarence J. Scamman of the State Department of Public Health told the Harvard Square Business Men's Association. He is director of the communicable diseases section.

"All epidemics of contagious diseases should be given full publicity," he said. "It is a fallacy to restrict any publication of facts of an epidemic in a community. If proper notice is not given the public, the spread may continue unabated."

Pittsburgh and Ottawa May Be Dropped From N. H. L.

HUB COULD SUPPORT 2 TEAMS

By BILL GRIMES

WITH the exceptions of Ottawa and Pittsburgh, the National Hockey League is a flourishing, dividend-paying industry with a bright future. But just so long as these weak sisters remain in the organization, its development will be retarded.

Because of the failure of Ottawa and Pittsburgh rumors are current annually to the effect that the franchises of these clubs will be transferred to more fertile fields.

Bill Grimes

It has been proven beyond question that Ottawa is not a major league city. The capacity of the rink is unsuitable for N. H. L. hockey accommodating only 8000, and it requires a dangerous stretching of the imagination to believe that there are that number of fans in the Ottawa arena even when it is jammed to the limit.

Ottawa is generally represented by one of the strongest teams in the N. H. L. Still more important, the players, for the most part, have been, and still are, local products.

Therefore, if with such great teams, plus the fact that the players are home breds, Ottawa lacks patronage to such an extent as to ask for the transferring of home games to other cities, it is high time the franchise was withdrawn from the Canadian capital.

SENTIMENT KEEPS SENATORS

Sentiment and civic pride are responsible for Ottawa carrying on in the National Hockey League. Ottawa was a member of the old Stanley Cup contender group, and has won this trophy no less than nine times. The old timers still point with pride to Frank McGee's record of scoring 16 goals in a Stanley Cup game against Pawson City and are naturally loathe to relinquish major league connections.

But the fact remains that Ottawa cannot support a major league club. The Ottawa fans are mostly government employes and even if the accommodations were such as to care for crowds equal to those in attendance in Boston, New York, Chicago, Detroit and Montreal, they have not sufficient capital to support their teams. The two-dollar seats are "tops" in Ottawa but rarely have the Senators played to a capacity house.

Pittsburgh has never had a fair chance to prove its claim to being a major league hockey city and the franchise has always been in the hands of small time promoters, who have refused to invest any real money in the promotion of the game in that city.

Aside from the fact that they were held up for some ridiculously high salaries by the players, the Pittsburgh club cost little more than the price of the franchises.

OWNERS SOLD STARS

The Yellow Jackets, the highest paid amateur players in the history of hockey, were taken over by the Townsends when out and out professional hockey was introduced in the Smoky City.

Instead of trying to build up a team which would be an attraction for the Pittsburgh fans, the promoters pulled a Harry Frazee and sold their two outstanding stars to the New York Americans, Lionel Conacher and Roy Worters. Today, the Pirates are not as strong a club as they were when they were known as the Yellow Jackets.

Unquestionably, there is some connection between the Pittsburgh and New York Americans. The Pirates operate from a New York office, where Benny Leonard, who is treasurer of the club, holds fort.

Negotiations are under way for the Madison Sq. Garden to purchase the Chicago Stadium, and if they go through, the Pittsburgh franchise may find a resting place in the Windy City.

Aside from the Bruins and possibly Lou Chamberlain, the Ottawa Senators are the best buy in the National Hockey League. It is one of the youngest clubs in the league and would return a substantial revenue if established in Chicago, Cleveland or St. Louis.

According to no less an authority than Pres. Frank Calder, Chicago "will be the next American city to be represented by two clubs. A movement was started last spring to place a second team in Chicago but Major McLaughlin refused to waive his territorial rights and the move was blocked.

At that time, the Blackhawks were playing in the old Coliseum, and it would have been serious "lese pas" on the Major's part, to

FLATLEY SAYS

BABE RUTH has taken the spotlight away from Cal Coolidge down in St. Petersburg, Fla.; the Babe is also one of those $5 a word writers—the Babe will play golf for a month; some day when he wins a tight match, Bob Shawkey can sign him up for anything at all. It's all fun for the Bam.

Francis Ouimet is one of the best impromptu after-dinner speakers in these parts—Bob Quinn says Ed Morris will not fight; which saves Ed a lot of unnecessary punishment—ten experts admit that Babe Ruth is the greatest all-round ball player living—Art the Great says that Shires is—just think how the great Art would pop after he was knocked punch drunk—but baseball will see that it doesn't happen—the magnates have had plenty of fighting for ten years, and the baseball contracts give them the power to prevent it—but they can't take the extra ten grand away from Arthur, though somebody will, at that.

THE athletes used to fight for fun,
With vim, and lusty curses:
But now they want to fight because,
They like those juicy purses.

GEORGE COHAN has strong hankerings still to become a baseball magnate—so has Ring Lardner—but getting into a good spot is no part of a careless gesture—Art Ross, Bruin manager is a raconteur of parts, and can put over a dialect story with the very best—Mike Costello, liason officer at various press gates, is smooth enough for a job at the League of Nations conference Judge Landis wants to meet Shires, but not in the ring Art suspects the judge is looking for publicity—big league hockey players have to keep in the finest physical trim of any of the athletes—and a baseball performer has to pay the least attention to hard exercising, once he gets in shape—boxers are inclined most to neglect the matter of prepping; that's why most of them look so bad in the ring.

HARVARD TO HAVE FINEST FIELD HOUSE

THE last word in modern athletic plants will rise on the site of the old Locker Building at Harvard.

The new building, which will take the place of the antiquated wooden structure razed by fire, will combine all the best features of similar field houses at Yale and Dartmouth.

The new plant will be much larger than that which housed Harvard athletes for 30 years.

One of the features of the new field house will be a classroom for use during the football season.

Firemen were still pumping water from the charred remains of the locker building when plans for the new structure were already being considered. An army of workmen will be called in to complete the process of demolition immediately.

Inside of a month Harvard hopes to have plans for the new building completed. The actual building will commence immediately after the plans have been approved by the donor, Clarence Dillon, '05, New York broker, and officials of the H. A. A.

WILL BE READY IN FALL

The new structure is expected to be finished about the middle of next summer, and should afford Harvard's 1930 football team a palatial dressing place.

Meanwhile, plans for providing for some 2000 athletes left sartorially destitute by the blaze were put through by the H. A. A. today.

Pressing demands of some 190 track aspirants were met by the co-operation of the H. A. A. and a local sporting goods store. Over 100 complete uniforms were bought for the use of the trackmen.

The material was delivered early today, and Coach Eddie Farrell will be able to have his boys back on the boards tomorrow.

Temporary lockers have been installed in the old Weld boathouses, and in the badly scorched old baseball cage. More lockers will be placed in the Briggs cage if the demand is sufficient.

Harvard hockey players lost 75 hockey sticks, imported from Canada for the use of the icemen, in the blaze. The sticks were imported at considerable cost to the H. A. A.

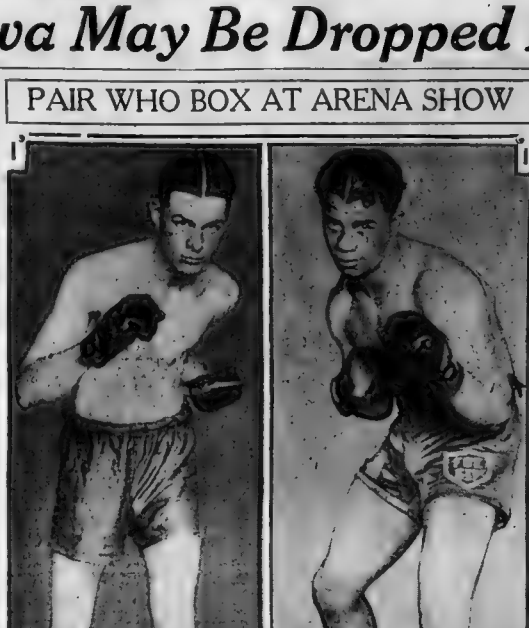
OUTSIDE HELP OFFERED

Harvard athletic officials have been bombarded with offers of other New England colleges to help out in their present situation. Brown University is said to have offered its entire athletic equipment to the Cantabs.

Percy Whitman and Hunt Wagstaff, junior track managers who saved the Wendell trophies at great personal risk during the height of the blaze, received congratulations from the students today.

Whitman and Hunt were almost overcome as they searched for Dr. Tompkins' medical records and the precious Wendell cups. There is a strong feeling among the students that the two should receive merit medals, and this suggestion will be acted upon at the next meeting of the athletic committee.

PAIR WHO BOX AT ARENA SHOW



Leslie Baker — Harry Allen

Leslie Baker, former national and New England amateur champ in the 147-pound class, will meet Joe O'Donnell in a four-round preliminary bout at the Arena tonight. Allen clashes with Joe Monte in the feature bout.

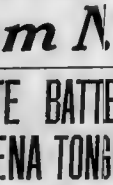
MONTE BATTLES ALLEN AT ARENA TONIGHT; GIBSON MEETS OFLAHERTY

By JACK CONWAY

COL. BOB McKIRDY modestly refers to his fistic offering at the Arena tonight as the greatest fighting card ever presented in Boston.

And it cannot be said that the good colonel is exaggerating much either. He has bifled 43 rounds of battling between as carefree a flock of punchers as were ever on the same card.

The feature 10-round bout will bring together Joe Monte and Harry Allen, Brockton ring rivals. It will be the second time these young men have traded broadsides. They collided on the same card with Rawson and Friedman and stole the show from Big Boy and Al.



Jack Conway

First Allen knocked Monte down, then Joe slapped Harry to the canvas. When the final gong sounded, the Brockton thumpers were bouncing right hand punches around in reckless style.

Allen has youth on his side. He is also a better socker than Monte. The latter is more aggressive than Allen, while he will carry experience into the ring with him.

Joe has clashed with Jimmy Braddock, Max Schmeling, George LaRocco and other illustrious sons of men. He now feels that by winning over Allen he can get a shot at Mahoney, Schaaf or Friedman. As Allen nurses similar ambitions, there should be some red hot milling tonight.

IT is expected that a capacity crowd will witness tonight's show as in addition to having a swell fighting card, the colonel has announced a price scale of $1, $1.50 and $2.

The eight-round semifinal will feature Tony Shucco of the North End and Bob Jasse of Revere. Shucco has only lost to Johnny Indriano since turning pro. He is a youngster with a ring future. He will receive stiff opposition when he mingles with the experienced Jasse tonight. The victor of this bout has been promised a crack at Al Mello who will come roaring down the fistic trail next month.

PAT O'FLAHERTY of South Boston and Ug Gibson of Medford, who furnished the most spectacular battle at the Golden Gloves tournament, will trade blows in a six-round session. O'Flaherty came up off the floor to edge out the decision over Gibson in their last meeting. Ug feels he will even up the score over the six-round route.

BESIDES the six-round bout between Patsy O'Flaherty, and Ug Gibson, there will also be a couple of more six-rounders. Laddie Lee of Somerville will blaze away at Mickey Sears of East Boston, while Izzy Kyman of England will toss punches at Jimmy McGonnigal of Weymouth.

Leslie Baker, sensational Watertown welterweight, will experience the most severe test he has had since turning pro when he stacks up against Joe O'Donnell of Roxbury in a four-round event.

Pat Perkins, South Boston heavyweight, will collide with Alex Russo of Watertown in another four-rounder. Sammy Mango of Dorchester and Charley Longo of the South End are also billed to step four frames, as are Joe Connolly of Dorchester and Tony Sarno of the North End.

Jack Conway Picks Monte to Win From Allen

JACK CONWAY, who holds all world records for picking winners of boxing bouts, has tossed his reputation as a prophet into the ring again.

Asked who would gain the honors in the Arena Club's show tonight, Jack said, "I like Joe Monte to win over Harry Allen in the 10-round feature. Monte is in splendid physical condition and I believe he has had a little too much ring experience for the heavy-punching Allen. It should be a hard fight, with Monte's experience gaining him the margin of victory.

"In the eight-round semi-final, I am striking gold with Tony Shucco of the North End to outpoint Bob Jasse of Revere."

RYDER PICKS K. C. ENTRIES

Boston College's entries for the William C. Prout memorial games, which will be held in the Garden a week from Saturday night, will be sent to Knights of Columbus officials today.

Three relay teams and eight starters in individual events constitute the Boston College representation.

The varsity mile team will race New Hampshire. The two-mile team will be in the draw and its opponents are not known. The freshman one-mile team is also entered in the open field of yearling quartets.

The varsity mile will consist of Guarino Pasquantonio, Joe McCabe, Bob Sullivan and Capt. Bill Mahony. McCabe will be supplanted by Jack O'Brien next Saturday night at the Brooklyn College meet, the first for B. C.'s one-mile team.

McCabe has been held back with a sickness and is a bit slower than O'Brien at present. O'Brien will run on the two-mile quartet with Tom Meagher, Tom Daley and Brendon Moynahan.

The freshman relay will be picked from Leo McCauley, Bob Jordan, John King, Don Fleet, Paul Dailey and Frank Lang. It looks like the first four named will carry the freshman colors.

John Kaveney will be in the high jump, Art Ward in the two-mile run, Ed Cheney, Frank Lang and Dan Larkin in the 300, Ernest Pearsall in the 600, Bernie Trum in the three-quarter mile run and Jerry Gatturna in the 45-yard low hurdles.

Fights Last Night

At Miami—Sammy Mandell, Rockford (Ill.) world's lightweight champion, and Manuel Quintero, Cuba, fought draw (10); Mike Large, Cleveland, outpointed Jimmy Smith, New York (8).

At New York—Slade Lobner and Charley Paul Cotton, lightweights, fought draw (10); Young Jack Thompson, Philadelphia, and Al Singer, New York, lightweights, fought draw (10).

B. C. ABOLISHES SCHOOL MEET

Boston College's interscholastic track meet, held annually for the past 15 years, will not be staged next spring, according to an announcement by Manager Tim Cree of B. C. track affairs.

The reason for the abolishment of the B. C. interscholastics, which have grown to be a very popular take-in for schoolboy runners from all parts of eastern Massachusetts, was that it had become too big and too great proportions.

Last spring there was a record entry. Over 480 schoolboy athletes, representing more than 40 schools, took part in the meet, which was supervised by Jack Ryder, Eagle track coach

Yanks Mail $75,000 Contract to Ruth

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—It may mean nothing at all to Babe Ruth, but the contract mailed to him by the New York Yankees calls for a salary of $75,000 a year for a two-year term. These are the terms the Babe declined recently before he left for Florida, holding out for $80,000

The contract was sent as a matter of form along with those of 20 other Yankee players. Ben Chapman already has signed his 1930 contract while Lou Gehrig, Henry Johnson and George Pipgras have holdouts arrangedin.

Injury Bars Delaney From Ring for Life

BRIDGEPORT, Ct., Jan. 16 (AP)—Jack Delaney, retired lightheavyweight champion of the world, has fought his last fight. Dr. George W. Hawley, bone specialist, wrote "finis" to Delaney's ring career last night when he declared that an injury to the right arm which has bothered the former champion for two years threatened to cripple the arm permanently unless Delaney abandons boxing.

With tears in his eyes, Delaney heard the doctor's dictum after an X-ray examination and hung up his gloves in Andy Parker's gymnasium.

Delaney, who retired from the light heavyweight title to enter the heavyweight ranks, was planning a comeback ring campaign. His first bout was to have been against Tom Kirby of Boston at the Providence arena on January 24.

The injury to his right arm is causing the bone to chip off within his right elbow, and the chipped bone is falling into a cavity which forces the elbow muscles to lock, Dr. Hawley said. This condition has temporarily disabled Delaney's arm on numerous occasions heretofore, and with recent complications threatens to cripple the right arm for life if he continues to box, the doctor said.

MAT RIVALS TRAIN HERE

Joe Malcewicz, Utica panther, and Joe Stecher, former heavyweight wrestling champion, are training in local gyms for their finish match at the Arena one week from tonight.

Wrestling, after a slow start this season, has taken hold again. The great displays of wrestling furnished by Gus Sonnenberg, Bob "Blibber" McCoy, Pat McGill, and Stecher have started the fans talking about the sport again, and Promoter Paul Bowser, with several more high grade shows in mind, believes that the grappling industry is in line for its biggest year.

America Loses Famous Pacer

One of the most famous of the two-minute pacing brigade passed from American racing when Louis Direct 1:58¼ was sold under the hammer in Chicago for $10,200 for export to Australia. The stallion raced in the stable of Walter T. Candler of Atlanta for five seasons has proved himself one of the best of the fast-class brigade, being a consistent winner for the Southern sportsman and taking his best record at the close of the 1928 season.

Mandell-Quintero Bout Called Draw

Miami Beach, Fla., Jan. 16—Sammy Mandell, world lightweight champion, and Manuel Quintero of Cuba, battled 10 fast rounds to a draw decision in their non-title bout at the Miami Beach Kennel Club's arena. A late rally by the Cuban enabled him to reach even terms with the champion.

Terriers Cancel Wrestling Meets

Intercollegiate wrestling will be dropped at Boston University this season.

The tentative schedule that was arranged will be cancelled. However, the candidates will continue practice and intra-mural competition will be substituted.

$11,500 OFFER TO SPEARS

Minneapolis, Minn., Jan. 16 (AP)—With the university of Minnesota making last minute efforts to keep him as head football coach, Dr. Clarence W. Spears started today for the West with the offer of an $11,500 annual salary as gridiron coach at the University of Oregon awaiting him.

Dr. Spears was elected coach at a meeting of the institution's executive council at Eugene last night and he will meet Dr. Arnold Bennett Hall, president of the Oregon school, at Missoula, Mont., Friday to discuss final acceptance.

Coach spears has been dissatisfied with management of athletic affairs at Minnesota, especially over financial matters relating to assistant coaches and their salaries.

The Gropher mentor receives $7500 a year at Minnesota and 10 votes all his time to football. At Oregon, in addition to the salary increase, he would be permitted to practice medicine in the off-football season.

Conqueror of Shires Back in Ring Tonight

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—George Trafton, veteran ring conqueror of Charles Arthur Shires, will make his second stand in the prize ring tonight by matching Rudy Hoffman, Chicago life-saver and physical culture instructor, in a four-round battle at the old Coliseum.

The big football player will outweigh Hoffman by 30 pounds.

Braddock Tosses Hat in With Heavies

Chicago, Jan. 16 (AP)—James J. Braddock, rugged New Jersey light-heavyweight, will join the heavyweight ranks after his 10 round engagement with Leo Lomski, the Aberdeen assassin, at the Chicago Coliseum tomorrow night.

Braddock for several months has been having difficulty keeping down his weight.

Mechanics Victor in Field Events

Mechanics Arts High kept up its power in the field events of the dual meet with Memorial High and finished with a total of 15⅝ points. Memorial had 72⅛ when the games were over.

Kretchmer's broad jumping for Mechanics was the feature. He won the senior event at 9 feet 6 inches.

Irish, also of Mechanics, jumped 5 ft. 6 inches to tie for top honors in the high jump.

Kojac Puts Rutgers Tank Team on Map

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—With George Kojac, sturdy Olympic swimmer, in the leading role, the Rutger team is making itself an important factor in the Intercollegiate Swimming Association race. Rutgers has engaged in two meets so far, winning both and each time Kojac has won the 50 and 100-yard free-style events and swam on the winning relay team.

Monty Wells to Defend A. A. U. Crown in K. of C. Meet

HARVARD AND H. C. TO MEET IN RELAY

MONTY WELLS, famous former Dartmouth hurdler, will try to retain his New England A. A. U. hurdling crown in the William C. Prout Memorial games, according to the announcement of the Hon. John E. Swift, who is directing the games.

The K. of C. head also explained that Harvard and Holy Cross will meet in both the freshman and varsity one-mile relay races.

Wells is the first two-legged affair that ever got over high hurdles at 45 yards in 54-5 seconds. He set this as a world record at the K of C. meet five years ago.

Since that time he has equalled the figure on several occasions and it also has been equalled by John Collier, the old Brown star.

WELLS HOLDS A. A. U. TITLE

Wells, who first saw hurdling power as a schoolboy down at Winthrop high, has been intercollegiate hurdle champion both indoors and out.

He also has won A. A. U. titles in fence contests. He is without a peer at this distance and always can be counted upon for a real thrill. He's a schoolmaster down at Roxbury school, the Yale prep just outside New Haven, but he still retains his spirit and will compete a week from Saturday night under the colors of the Boston A. A.

A Harvard-Holy Cross race at the mile in the K. of C. games has been uninterrupted since Notre Dame came here way back in the days of the "four horsemen" to race the Crimson. Holy Cross, with its well-balanced team, has won the majority of the contests.

HARVARD VS. H. C. FOUR

Harvard expects to catch the Crusaders this year, for it has a veteran and well balanced four. It also has some great recruits from the freshman team, and it is as strong as it ever has been.

Sullivan, the coach at Holy Cross, says that Bernie Morrissey may not make the team. That is the tip-off in the power he has to draw on.

Klumbach is the leader and a great quarter-miler. Sullivan intends sending the strong stuff after a record. The new track at the Garden has been rebuilt and that means better and speedier racing.

PURJE IN BAD WITH TRACK OFFICIALS

NEW YORK, Jan. 16 (AP)—The rigors of a warm New York winter for one who is accustomed to Finland's cold are threatening to cause trouble for Eno Purje this year just as they did for his famous countryman, Paavo Nurmi, a year ago.

Purje, scheduled to make his first appearance of the indoor track season at the Pastime A. C. games last night, withdrew at the last minute because of a case of tonsilitis and promptly found himself in bad with Amateur Athletic Union authorities.

Daniel J. Ferris, secretary of the A. A. U., said the failure to compete would be investigated today. The case is similar to the one which caused Nurmi's indefinite suspension when he did not turn up for the national championships last year.

Purje sent a doctor's certificate, addressed to Ferris saying that an attack of tonsilitis would prevent his running. In Nurmi's case a physician also certified as to his illness, but the phantom Finn took the misfortune to have it delivered a few days late.

Ray Conger, former Iowa star, was made an overwhelming favorite for the feature race, the Myles McHugh Memorial 1500-metre run. Conger tried to make one of his famous finishes and fell when he touched the foot of Gus Venske of the Swedish-American A. C., who was ahead of him. The spill put him out of the running and gave an easy victory to Gus Moore, national cross-country champion. Venske finished second, while Conger got up to finish third and last. Willie Ganzel, veteran New York Finn, found a 75-yard handicap given to Joe McClusky, Fordham, holder of the freshman intercollegiate cross-country title, entirely too much for him in the two-mile handicap. He also finished far back, while McCluskey went on to win.

N.H.L. MAY DROP TWO TEAMS

allow a newcomer to compete against the Hawks in the Stadium, which is said to be the last word in hockey arenas.

Judging from the crowds which have been attending the Bruins' games for the past three seasons, Boston is well qualified to support another big league club. Tickets for Bruins' home games are at a premium every week.

Thousands of fans are unable to get accommodations regardless of the attraction. The city is hockey mad and in spite of Calder's contention that Boston is not able to support two teams, the Hub fans would turn out for 44 games as well as they attend the 22 Bruin games.

Still, more important, it is not absolutely necessary to have a winner to receive the backing of Boston enthusiasts.

Although the exact destination of the present Ottawa and Pittsburgh franchise will not be made known until after the annual meeting this spring, it is a foregone conclusion that these cities are to pass out of the National Hockey League at the end of the present season.

MURPHY WILL AID ATHLETES

At a reception and banquet tendered the Somerville high football squad at the school gym, Mayor Murphy promised that he would do his utmost to help the football team of the city. The mayor also stated that plans of the city call for a big improvement in the playing surface of Dilboy Field.

Toastmaster James Kenney and other speakers at the banquet also pledged their aid in furthering the interests of the Somerville grid t'ams

The expressions of interest in the athletic work of the high school indicate that the boys of the institution are to get all the help possible in developing strong grid teams.

Charley Dickerman, Somerville head coach of football, was praised highly for his great work with the Suburban League championship team by all of the speakers.

Two dual meets are carded for the East Armory this afternoon when Hyde Park faces South Boston, and Brighton battles East Boston. Dana White of Southie has a probable regimental games champion, in the 300, in Jimmy Kelley.

Brighton has some fast boys but East Boston should provide real competition for the Brighton recers.

The only school swimming meet of the week is on today, when the Malden high team goes to the Huntington pool. Huntington has some boys who have turned in fast time recently, and the Blue and Gold is in for a difficult time

N. E. Clowns Seek Basketball Foes

The New England Clowns basketball team have a few open dates and would like to fill them with any strong semi-pro five in New England.

Manager Ray O'Neil would like to hear from Falmouth, Foxboro A. I., Plainfield and Connecticut teams that wish to book a first-class drawing card. Write him at 89 Clement ave., West Roxbury, or call Parkway 2158-M.

SHIRES IS AGAIN 'ON CARPET'

Chicago, Jan. 16 (INS)—Shadows of tragedy threatened today to bring the comedy of Arthur "The Great" Shires to an anti-climax. Even Sir Arthur, the unassuming baseball player, possessed of ring aspirations, is frowning over the request of Judge Kenesaw Mountain Landis, ordering said Arthur before him for a conference this Monday.

Although the high commissioner of baseball said the conference is to be a session given over to fatherly advice, Commissioner Landis also intimated that Shires is to be given his choice between boxing gloves and a first baseman's mitt.

Arrows Tie With Eagles

Philadelphia, Jan. 16—The Arrows entered into a tie with the Boston Tigers for third place in the Canadian-American League by playing a 1 to 1 overtime tie with the New Haven Eagles here.

It looked like a certain defeat for the local team for with two seconds left to play they were trailing the visitors, 1 to 0. The home team ploughed around the New Haven goal and finally Cahill took a pass from R. Nichols and backhanded the disc past Jakie Forbes, who played a great game in the nets.

BROTHERS IN TITLE TILTS

Two South Boston brothers are being selected to win titles at the annual State amateur boxing championships, which will be held at the Boston Arena next Monday night

Pat Connolly, a welterweight who already holds a decision over Charlie Kelley of Newton, one of the topnotchers in this class, and his brother, Johnny Connolly, in the lightweight division, are the brothers whose fistic ability has aroused much great interest.

South Boston, the incubator of boxers, expects each of these boys to make good in the ring. This will be their first big tournament

However, the welterweight division will provide all sorts of trouble for Connolly or any other ambitious title aspirant, for all of the topnotchers will participate.

Alex Wallace of Quincy, Charlie Kelley of Newton, Chris De Rosa of East Boston and George McNeil of Lynn are among some of the boys already entered in this division. There is little to choose among them.

Ring Larson of Quincy, hard-punching middleweight, who has been absent from recent amateur tournaments, will return to the fistic wars for this tourney. Larson is a dangerous two-handed puncher, expects to make a big for the 160-pound crown, Larson, by the way, is the present holder of the middleweight title.

GOOD GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON
"Golf's Greatest Teacher"

It seems paradoxical to cite that a large and lighter golf ball than the present ball would speed up golf, but that is what the new ball will do, because it will promote ball mess of play, and thus increase skill in second shots and play around the green. If in the short game where the average golfer runs up his extra strokes, though he doubtless never has discovered that fact. His effort has been concentrated on making long drives that the several extra strokes used up in getting through the fairgreen have escaped his analytical attention. Part of this breakdown in play, however, had been due to the resiliency of the present ball, making it most difficult to control the short game. Even the pros who could drive the ball well over 300 yards have not made the very low scores, consequently that most of them should have made with such driving, due to the fact that the hard, resilient ball was so difficult to control. The new ball will pitch more like the old gutta percha ball, and after next year I predict that you as an average golfer will find your enthusiasm for particular shots will switch from the drive to the pitch.

GIRLS, DO NOT RISK LOSING PRECIOUS LOVE

Utmost Tact Often Needed, Says Famous Writer

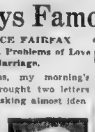
By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

An Authority on Problems of Love and Marriage.

AS it happens, my morning's mail has brought two letters from two girls asking almost identically the same question.

"Would you advise me to continue my friendship with him?" inquires Nellie. "Or shall I try to forget him?"

While Blue Lou asks: "Am I doing the right thing by going out with him? Or shall I try to forget him?"



Beatrice Fairfax

These questions suggest a dilemma, which many a girl finds herself—a situation where the utmost tact, patience, good sense and affectionate good humor are needed if a worthwhile friendship—possibly a precious love, are to be salvaged.

First I ashil quote from Nellie's letter:

"Dear Miss Fairfax:

"Will you kindly help me solve a problem that I have been working on for some time?

"I have been keeping company with a boy for over two years, and still think very much of him, but he doesn't seem to care very much for me; that is, I don't think he acts it.

"During the two years I went out with him three or four nights a week, but several months ago a great change came over him and he doesn't care to go with me over once a week.

"He pretended to care very much for me, but somehow or other he started going around with other girls. He never wanted me to use lipstick, smoke or dress like a flapper, but those are the kind of girls he goes with now, and he thinks them nice girls.

"During the time he went with me, he gave me many presents, among them a ring which was meant for an engagement ring, which I still have and think very much of.

"When he started going around with other girls we started quarreling, and he stayed away from me for over five weeks. He came back and I went out with him several times again. We had another quarrel and he stayed away for some time.

"While he stayed away from me the first time, I met another fellow who took me out several times a week, and also other fellows who took me out, but I did not have as good a time with any of them as I would have had with him.

"I still go out with him, but he is always telling me about his other girls, and trying to hurt my feelings. Do you think he cares anything about me? Or is he trying to make me jealous? Would you advise me to continue my friendship with him? Or shall I try to forget him?

"NELLIE."

Lou's letter is so similar to Nellie's that in order to avoid repetition I shall not print it. She mentions, however, that she and her sweetheart are 19, and she writes:

"He also tells me that he likes to go out with me better than any other girl, but if that is true why does he go out with other girls? He seems to prefer their company. Do you think he would do this if he loved me as he says he does? I am a girl who does not care for wild times, and those are the kind of girls he likes to go out with."

The home girl, the nice girl, the womanly girl, is the girl a man's heart calls for with a call that will not be denied, if he is worth while. She is the girl he wants to marry. Her's is the influence he wishes in his home.

But, meantime, there is the "wild girl" with whom he can have an easy good time—the girl possibly who runs after him. He does not wish to marry her. He may not even respect her. But in certain moods she is an entertaining lure. Now and then, thanks to propinquity, he succumbs this type of girl, although he had intended to settle down one day with the "girl of his dreams." Then he wonders why his marriage is not happy.

Sympathetic understanding and patience are needed by a girl when her sweetheart is torn between conflicting attractions. That is not the time to refuse his friendship—that is not the time to forget him, it is the time he may need most of all your inspiration.

Strange Voice Comes Over the Wire

Outdoor Sports Enhance Loveliness

By MARIA JERITZA

AS I write the air is filled with the laughter and shouts of young folks. They are skating on a pond within a stone's throw of the country house where I happen to be spending a few hours. Swiftly they speed over the ice, keeping balance and rhythm with the agility, skill and grace entailed for and developed by the art of ice-skating.

Maria Jeritza

Their lungs are filled with the life giving, beauty giving fresh air, which they inhale deeply, thanks to the force of the outdoor exercise. The bracing fun of outdoor sport fills the heart with wholesome happiness and chases cobwebs from the brain.

When they return, presently, for luncheon their cheeks will be flushed with lovelier red than the most artful rouge can simulate and their lips will not need lipstick. Their eyes will sparkle and every movement of their healthy young bodies will express litheness and spontaneous grace.

The wintry outdoors is truly a school of grace and beauty. It takes a little courage, it is true, to start out on a frosty winter's day, when the fire at home is alluring and there is a good novel to read. But by the time you have spent half an hour exercising in that frosty air you will be repaid a thousand times over for the effort it took to break away from the warmth and inactivity of indoors.

"I have no natural color—without rouge I would be like a ghost—yet I eat nourishing food and live a healthy life. Yes, I walk a little in the subway and bark. But it is impossible to have natural color when you do indoor work in a big city eight hours a day."

This and similar arguments are often put forward by women, who maintain that a lovely natural complexion is impossible under modren conditions. But the fact remains, exquisite natural color is within your reach if you are healthy and willing to pay the price. And the price, also, is within your means—it is a daily, active outdoor exercise in addition to the other conditions of sensible living.

You may or may not have time to walk five miles every day. But you can take half an hour for a brisk walk before you go to bed at night. Walk fast, a lazy stroll counts for nothing. Why do you not make it a habit to walk two miles of the way home at night after your work? Or devote part of your lunch hour, rain or shine, to an energetic hike?

At all seasons of the year, outdoor exercise, combined with daily use of warm soapsuds, cold softened running water and a good cold cream should give your skin the texture and coloring of a June rose.

Moreover, when you have a half-holiday you can take a five-hour tramp or else, putting on your ice skates and swating shoes, you can forget all your troubles, worries and fears in the exhilarating fun of the sport.

The great advantage of outdoor exercise as a beauty measure is that it aids alike in giving the complexion natural roses, ridding the skin of blotches and keeping the body lithe and symmetrical. An hour of brisk exercise outdoor should also send you home tired enough to sleep well—in itself a boon to your looks.

But just one word of warning. Outdoor aperits are not in themselves a panacea for all complexion ills. You will need to avoid a weather-beaten skin, which is anything but beautiful, by abundant use of nourishing cold cream, when over the wind and air bring lines as they are likely to do. Remove traces of cream with tissue make-up squares.

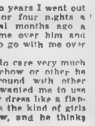
Clever Home-Made Candy

IT'S really surprising how expert homemade hard candies, such as lollypops and glazed nuts can be made to look, if you will follow a few simple foundation rules.



Martha Lee

The glaze is made with 2 c. of sugar, 2 c. of water and coloring and flavoring.

The sugar, water, corn syrup are put in a straight sauce pan such as the upper part of your double boiler. Before putting on the fire stir the mixture until the sugar is completely dissolved and does not grate against the side of the pan. Then boil without stirring, until the syrup reaches 310 F. or until a little dropped in cold water is very brittle.

Toward the end of the cooking turn the gas flame down very low so that the sugar will not discolor. Occasionally wipe down the sides of the pan with a wet brush or wet cloth.

Remove the pan from the fire, add the coloring and flavoring, stirring only just enough to blend the color. Drop from the tip of a teaspoon onto slightly greased porcelain top table or heavy tray making rounds the size of a nickel or a dime. As the candy cools insert skewers and shape the candy into lollypop form.

PEANUT TAFFY

2 tbsps. butter
1 c. sugar
½ c. corn syrup
½ c. molasses
½ c. water
1 c. shelled peanuts
½ tsp. soda

Melt butter in sauce pan, add sugar, corn syrup, molasses and water. Boil until the mixture is brown. Add peanuts and soda, mix thoroughly, pour into buttered pan and press in squares.

If you have any special candy that you'd like to attempt at home, let me know and too glad to send you the recipe.

Faithfully yours,
MARTHA LEE.

Warding Off Low Spirits

By LUCY LOWELL.

YOUNG Mrs. Robert Bates writes me that she is sick and tired of things.

"And I shouldn't be," she wails in her letter. "Really, there isn't any reason in the world why I should not be as chock full of enthusiasm as I was three years ago when I was married and anything with my lovely new home and my wonderful new husband and the fun of entertaining and planning their bon's and going to the bridge club and a week and listening for Robert's step on the porch at six-thirty-nine.

"Nothing has changed, Miss Lowell, unless it's something inside of me. And what can I do about it? I don't want to get bored and seedy like some wives I know. Can't you help me?"

I wish I could, lady dear. But someway I have a feeling that help must come from you yourself—from the very place where you think things have gone wrong inside yourself.

Haven't you done what those other wives you mention have done—what so many, many have done—let yourself go to seed a bit? That can happen, you know, even within three years.

Easy enough to drop into the abyss of habit, to start going through life as if you were a machine instead of a woman. You see I suspect this to be the case from your own statement about friend husband coming home at 6.38. Odd that the exact minute should be impressed on your brain as if it were registered on a machine—now isn't it?

Why not act upon this hypothesis and change your routine for a few days?

Why not drop out of the bridge club for a time? It must become rather monotonous, this bridge afternoon, when repeated week after week and year after year. Align yourself with a new group; a study circle or, better yet, a group engaged in welfare work. The shred of knowledge you have of the mental doldrums is that of doing something constructive for others.

And your husband, when he comes downtown for dinner now and then? Forget the 6.39 home coming occasionally.

Vary your regime, my dear. Don't operate with so much precision. Flesh and blood cannot stand it.

Lovejoy -:- Serial by Beatrice Burton

I'm going down town. Please let me send you a cake from the bakery."

Lovejoy shook her head.

"No, no, no!" she answered firmly. "I can't eat up another cake in five minutes . . . I'm not always as busy as this, but I've asked my aunt and uncle over for our anniversary dinner and I wanted to do it all myself, just to show them how well I could do it. Please come again."

She held out her hand, and Mrs. Alderson took it in her white-gloved one.

But she didn't say 'Good-by,' and she didn't go.

"Just now," she cried, "when you dropped those flowers into my lap, I couldn't help but see what was written on the card that came with them . . . and I was just wondering how long your husband will think you are the most beautiful girl in the world."

Lovejoy stared at her.

Then she laughed.

"Tom always had thought I was wonderful-looking," she said. "I suppose a man always does think his own wife is a prize beauty."

She wished that this stranger hadn't seen what Tom had written to her. And even if she had seen it she certainly ought not to have spoken about it.

"But you really are a prize beauty," she was saying now in her light pretty voice. "What I'm trying to tell you is that you won't be very long, though, if you keep on slaving and fussing like this . . . I've been watching you for weeks from my house. Hanging clothes out in the yard, shaking rugs, emptying rubbish, washing windows, taking the baby out for walks. . . ."

"Why, of course!" Lovejoy broke in with spirit. She wasn't going to let this strange woman stand there and tell her that she was an overworked drudge. Not if she knew herself.

"Why shouldn't I do these things?" she asked, and her gray eyes widened. "That's why I married for—to look after my home and my baby and husband."

Mrs. Alderson shrugged one brown velvet shoulder.

"Please don't be cross with me," she said smoothly. "I really was trying to give you some good advice."

She took her hand out of Lovejoy's and laid it on the head of the big police dog.

"It's all right for you to think that you married your husband so that you could take care of him and his child," she went on. "But have you ever stopped to think why you married your husband?"

Lovejoy thought she knew the answer to that, but she said nothing. She wasn't going to discuss Tom and his love for her with this woman whom she barely knew.

"He married you because you were attractive," Mrs. Alderson answered her own question. "I'm older than you are—and I've found out a lot of things about men. And I know that they don't care for their women because they're good housekeepers or mothers . . . but because they're pretty and attractive."

She opened the front door, letting a breath of warm autumn air and the smell of dead leaves into the little house.

"And you can't be beautiful and attractive if you're dead-tired when they come home at the end of the day," she finished. "You make your husband hire a housemaid or nursemaid for you right away. You'll see, it will pay you, in the long run."

She went down the steps of the house. At the bottom of them she turned and smiled up into Lovejoy's startled face.

"I suppose no one has ever talked like this to you before in your whole life," she said amiably. "And I know I've never talked to a woman as I've talked to you this afternoon—especially a woman that I hardly know. But I've come to feel friendly toward you, watching you from my back windows every now and then. . . . By the way, my husband and I want you people to come over some night and play cards with us. You will, won't you?"

"Yes, indeed," answered Lovejoy and closed the door of the house as she went back into it.

"But I'm not going near her," she told herself when she was standing behind the net curtains, watching her neighbor's slender figure vanish down the street. Coming over here, pitying me, just because I haven't as much money as she has . . ."

And yet, hadn't there been a lot of plain solid truth in what Mrs. Alderson had said? Wasn't it a mistake for a woman to forget to wash her hair once a week, and to polish her nails every day and put cream on her face at night to keep the worry-lines away?

She looked down at her hands the nails were short and one of them was broken . . . A few months ago they had been the envy of carved ivory and coral. And her hair. It hadn't been washed for two weeks. She had noticed only that morning that it had lost its fluffy, lustrous look.

It would be nice if we could afford to have someone come in once a week to do the washing and clean the house," she found herself thinking as she went back into the kitchen with its burned cake and smoking oven. "All that is really too much for me . . ."

And so the first seeds of discontent and dissatisfaction were planted in her mind that afternoon.

Great Creative Instinct of Women

By LOUIS E. BISCH, M.D., Ph.D.

Famous Authority on Health and Psychology

WOMEN possess the greatest creative instinct of all and that is motherhood.

The usurping of this creative impulse of motherhood explains why comparatively few women have achieved superlative and lasting greatness in the arts.

The bearing and rearing of children uses it all up. That is most of it! And that, by the way, is a mighty valuable way of using it.

Dr. L. E. Bisch

Women like George Sand, Rosa Bonheur, George Eliot, Sara Bernhardt have been great artists, but they are the exception that proves the rule.

Mme. Schumann-Heink is a law unto herself. She is at one and the same time as artist of the highest rank as well as a notable mother.

How far this is possible—that is, whether women could be similarly creative in lines outside the home as well as in it, is open to question. From the records of past performances, as one might infer, it certainly would appear that the average woman cannot excel in any such double role.

It seems a pity, nevertheless, that more women have not been able to stick to creative pursuits after they have become married.

To be sure, women vary in creative ability and possibility, one from the other, as they vary in everything else. Some undoubtedly possess such attributes decidedly stronger than others.

The woman whose inherent potentials for creation is about the usual amount will undoubtedly find children sufficiently satisfying during her lifetime.

But in the woman whose creation is strong, this may not be the case She needs something more, some thing different, to express herself

After a while motherhood duties bore her and make her feel shut in and unhappy. This is the very woman who should practice artistic pursuits.

Sewing, designing clothes, millinery are all creative artistic pursuits. Such women do not necessarily have to go in for painting, sculpturing, music or writing to find satisfaction. These are all fine, to be sure, but they cannot be carried out as readily or as economically as those first named.

Many dissatisfied, restless woman, even if a mother, may only be craving added expression for a strong fundamental creative instinct.

Some women possess it much more powerfully than others, and each woman should judge for herself how much of the fundamentally creative instinct she possesses.

It does not follow that one need stick to the same form of creative expression to find lasting satisfaction, nor that one need necessarily excel in the field chosen.

Indeed, variety always appeals to the feminine mind. Different hobbies, where the imagination may have free play in construction of new ideas, are excellent in keeping the emotions satisfied.

I repeat, however, that motherhood is the best outlet of all. Its variety never ceases. It is the most natural of all the emotional expressions of which a woman is capable.

Listen, World!

By ELSIE ROBINSON

JANUARY the first . . . Nineteen Hundred and Thirty—

Where will you live this year?

No, I'm not trying to discover your address. Your street and number are comparatively unimportant, for that isn't where you really live. The place where you live is . . . you.

Elsie Robinson

Your thoughts, your desires, your prejudices, your attitudes . . . They are your abiding place. They are the house by which men judge your station in life. And according as they are wide or cramped, beautiful or ugly, so will your life be for this next year.

Once a poet wrote these death less lines:

"Build me more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler
Than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more fair!
Till thou at last are free,
And, master of thine outgrown shell on life's untesting sea."

What will you build this year and into what outgrown shell on it will you leave it?

Is the home of your spirit a white temple, set high above the turmoil of the world, with windows open to the wind and sun and stars?

Or is it a friendly place, warm with sympathy, gay with mirth, where all who pass may find rest and delight?

Is it a tight walled windowless tower, set proudly on some peak . . . but dark within . . . sealed by your egotism from the cleansing air and quickening storm of experience? A tower of SELF?

Is it a careless, untidy litter . . . cheaply thrown together . . . at the mercy of every chance gust of emotion?

Is it a low roofed hovel, dark with the cobwebs of hate, suspicion, ignorance and fear?

Or a silly, papier-mache affair built of the unsubstantial trash of dreams?

Whatever it is you have bodily dwelling place, but you yourself, are responsible for the house of your spirit. And, as you have made it, so it will make you.

If you live in a cell you will live as a prisoner, no matter how proud your walls. And, little by little, life will pass you by.

If you live in a hovel you will be pestered by your own darkness and disorder.

If you live in dreams you will starve on dreams and break your heart on dreams, for you will be shut away from reality.

But if you live in beauty and friendliness all that is fine in life will come to your door . . . and sometimes, when all is quiet, you may glimpse God.

And make no mistake . . . Wherever you live, the world will know it and judge you by your house. You may hide your street and number from men, but you cannot hide the house you have built for your spirit, for that goes with you and shows you live it.

Build me more stately mansions, O my soul,
As the swift seasons roll!
Leave thy low-vaulted past!
Let each new temple, nobler
Than the last,
Shut thee from heaven with a dome more fair!
Till thou at last are free,
And, master of thine outgrown shell on life's untesting sea."

What will you build this year and into what outgrown shell on it will you leave it?

Is the home of your spirit a white temple, set high above the turmoil of the world, with windows open to the wind and sun and stars?

Or is it a friendly place, warm with sympathy, gay with mirth, where all who pass may find rest and delight?

Is it a tight walled windowless tower, set proudly on some peak . . . but dark within . . . sealed by your egotism from the cleansing air and quickening storm of experience? A tower of SELF?

Is it a careless, untidy litter . . . cheaply thrown together . . . at the mercy of every chance gust of emotion?

Is it a low roofed hovel, dark with the cobwebs of hate, suspicion, ignorance and fear?

Or a silly, papier-mache affair built of the unsubstantial trash of dreams?

Whatever it is you have bodily dwelling place, but you yourself, are responsible for the house of your spirit. And, as you have made it, so it will make you.

If you live in a cell you will live as a prisoner, no matter how proud your walls. And, little by little, life will pass you by.

If you live in a hovel you will be pestered by your own darkness and disorder.

If you live in dreams you will starve on dreams and break your heart on dreams, for you will be shut away from reality.

But if you live in beauty and friendliness all that is fine in life will come to your door . . . and sometimes, when all is quiet, you may glimpse God.

And make no mistake . . . Wherever you live, the world will know it and judge you by your house. You may hide your street and number from men, but you cannot hide the house you have built for your spirit, for that goes with you and shows you live it.

BAY STATE MAN HEADS WORLD'S LARGEST BANK

By FRANK H. MELOON
Financial Editor

Associated Press is sponsor for the statement that the world's largest bank is now the National City Bank of New York. Several months ago Charles Edwin Mitchell, born in Chelsea, was elevated to the chairmanship, and Gordon S. Rentschler made president. Mr. Mitchell comes of Colonial stock on both sides of the family and his father was at one time a leading Boston merchant and a mayor of Chelsea.

Mr. Mitchell has done heroic work through two panic periods, the first in 1907. In April of last year he asserted a strong public on the New York Stock Exchange when call money was boosted to 20 per cent, by supplying the stock market with funds.

The National City Bank, as of latest reported date, had resources of $2,206,211,410, compared with $2,-

The "live" members of Chambers of Commerce and like organizations are constantly studying traffic problems because they know such prosperity as we now enjoy, as well as its expansion, depends largely on making transportation as speedy as is consistent with safety. Ahead this line they would like to see generally adopted the rule of the road the rules so long in the making. If a private business corporation were handling the situation, traffic rules would have been made everywhere uniform long ago.

As it is today, the tourist in New England never knows whether he is within the law, for example, in having three sitting on the front seat of his car. In some places he will be required to pay a fine or go into court for having three in the front seat, in other places it seems as if "everybody's doing it" is the song used to say. One example of many.

At the Boston Chamber of Commerce I heard investment expressed over a National Broadcasting Company "Universal Safety Series" radio playlet entitled "Cross Road Traffic" In this the "judge" is made to say "They've got no business driving cars if they don't understand the different rules." New England tourists would not get very far if they had to understand all the conflicting rules that prevail today. The local police, however, save the situation by applying common sense. Rarely is an out-of-the-state car troubled by them.

With 82,000 of the new British-type cars made in the U. S. A., sold in America according to 70 agents at the New York Auto Show we have a significant straw indicating that the highways and byways to be somewhat changed automobile-wise during the coming year. There are few things that attract more attention than an unusual make of automobile.

The Interstate Commerce Commission orders the Baltimore & Ohio to divest itself of its holdings in Western Maryland. State attorneys this see a step for the U. S. Court to stand by its own plan for railroad consolidations. In the so-called Porter plan for the consolidation of railroads into 19 major systems, now before the commission, the Western Maryland was allocated to the Wabash-Seaboard Air Line System.

Engineers National Bank has elected the following officers: Threll M. Eagan, president; Charles A. Rowell, vice-president; Ernest F. Pelton, vice-president and Daniel P. Desmond, cashier.

Had there been no break in Wall Street U. S. Steel employees might have paid $5 to $10 dollars more for the 100,000 shares to be allotted them this year under the profit-sharing plan. They get the $169, the equivalent of about 22% for the old stock before the 50 per cent stock dividend.

This is the highest price employees have yet paid. The average is far below that. As an example, common stock first was offered to workers at $50 in 1909 from 1909 to 1924, inclusive, employees were allotted stock each year at prices between $50 and $100 with three exceptions. Thousands of shares of preferred were acquired between $96 and $124 from 1902 to 1914, inclusive. Some employes are now very large holders of both preferred and common. Dividends thereon would permit many of them to retire very comfortably for the rest of their lives.

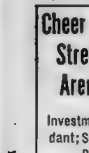
Cheer Up, Wall Street, Things Aren't Hopeless

Investment Money Abundant; Stockholders Show Big Increase

By B. C. FORBES

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—The cry was: "Take the stock market off the front page."

It's off! The market is deader than at any time since mid-1928. It is so lifeless that bulls can't make any money, bears can't make any money, brokers can't do a big money — nobody can make any money — except you reason that they are making money who are speculating by staying away.



B. C. Forbes

From President Hoover down the exhortation was: "Let us return to normalcy."

Well! Present is normalcy — to normalcy plus, or would you say normalcy minus?

Yet — such is human nature — having got what it thought it wanted, Wall Street is quite dissatisfied. It wants action. It wants ginger. It wants fluctuations. It detests stagnation.

Everybody and every corporation and every institution was asked to do everything it possibly could to avoid causing unemployment. If a census were taken, it would be found that the ratio of unemployment among "Wall Street houses" is greater than in the average retail or steel industry or textile industry or lumber industry or building industry or any other industry save, perhaps, lobbying.

Not only have Wall Street houses slashed their forces right and left, but they have become so whitelivered that many of them have drastically cut down their selling efforts, including advertising.

The indigoness of Wall Street's funk was revealed yesterday in an indirect but emphatic way—Wall Street was amazed that $50,000,000 of American Telephone bonds could be disposed of faster than hot-cakes and that investors feared that nothing could be sold, that everybody had lost everything (including heads), that the whole financial and investment outlook was bleak, bleak, bleak. Wall Street gets that "bleak" feeling after up in dizzy clouds or buried in the goldrums.

Consider Wall Street's attitude towards investment trusts. There you have an ideal example of how Wall Street has performed a fundamental somersault.

Before the gay boom broke, it was sufficient for any first-rate or second-rate or even third-rate Wall Street firm to announce a new investment trust offering to send the stock 10 or 20 or 30 or 40 points above the figure at which insiders were privileged to subscribe at. No easier way has ever been discovered to make profits in half the twinkling of an eye. It was notoriously a case of "trust" rather than investment.

Lo, nothing is more distrusted today than these so-recently alluring securities. They are now selling ex-trust, ex-liamor, ex-vapor. More than one respectably sponsored investment trust's stock has been selling for less than the amount of the trust's hard cash reposing in the treasury.

Wall Street gets that way. It sees silver lining in every cloudshot the hole, or the hole without the doughnut.

Of course, Wall Street will regain its senses, including its sense of perspective and proportion. It will by and by realize that everybody wasn't ruined in the panic. It will realize that the heaviest losses befell those best able to afford them.

Wall Street may not belive it, but the truth is that the total number of individuals owning stocks has greatly increased during recent months. Corporation head after corporation head has been piling up facts and informed me that his stockholders' list is much longer today than it was when shares were selling at fancy heights. Increases have ranged from a few thousand to almost fifty thousand.

President Alvan Macauley, of Packard Motors, tells me that every such gain in company ranks has added 40,000 stockholders "during the past few weeks, an increase of 150 per cent."

Does not this suggest that hundreds of thousands of citizens and families of moderate means, inspired to get their feet on solid ground, were in a position to seize the opportunity afforded by the panic to acquire attractive — in fact extremely attractive prices?

That's a phase which has been generally lost sight of. Is it not a most interesting and encouraging phase? That suggests that many humble folks had sounder grasp of the realties than many multi-millionaires had. Some of the latter have had their fortunes pruned to the extent of from $50,000,000 to so much, it is understood, as $280,000,000 in two or three cases.

Cheer up, Wall Street! Get busy!

CURB MARKET LEADERS ARE RUN HIGHER

By CLAUDE A. JAGGER

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—With a beating of the Standard Light and Commonwealth and Southern companies, and a good earnings report by United Light, there have been recent factors reviving speculative enthusiasm.

United Light A was again in keen demand, rising to a new high for the movement at 38, which contrasts with a peak last September of 61¾. Niagara Hudson Power, which has been sluggish of late, showed renewed strength, moving up above 14. This appeared to be in response to indications of a settlement of the power policy dispute between Gov. Roosevelt and the Republican leaders of the New York Legislature.

Electric Bond & Share, Standard Gas & Electric, Standard Investing Light and Traction were in fair demand. The new Standard Light stock was admitted to trading, moving at 62 on the first sale.

Fox Theatres A was a strong spot in the specialties, rising more than a point in response to announcement that the Fox interests would offer $35,000,000 in short term notes to meet their current obligations. Industrials generally remained extremely dull.

The unfavorable production figures are by their nature having only a moderately depressing influence on the oils. Humble and Standard of Kansas sold off a point or more. Mines showed little response to the statistics as to production and stocks in December.

Investment trusts moved in narrow range. Trust National had a burst of activity in the morning but quickly attracted profit taking.

STOCK MARKET DRAWS GOLD

Washington, Jan. 16—U. S. Department of Commerce announces that exports of gold during 1929 totaled $116,883,000 as compared with $560,760,000 in 1928. Imports of gold increased from $168,897,000 to $291,640,000.

Influx of the precious metal to this country was ascribed by the Department of Commerce to activity in the stock markets and corresponding high rates of interest.

During December exports of gold mounted, totaling $72,567,000 compared with $1,636,000 in the same month of last year.

Silver exports for 1929 were $83,398,000 against $87,382,000 last year. Imports totaled $63,927,000 against $58,117,000.

For December silver exports were $6,359,000 against $8,489,000 for December last year. Imports totaled $4,477,000 in December against $5,120,000 a year previous.

Wickwire Spencer Report Due Soon

New York, Jan. 16—Hearings which have been in progress since August have been concluded before Judge Moore, special master appointed by Judge Hazel in Buffalo to hear testimony in foreclosure suit by trustees of mortgage of Wickwire Spencer Steel Co., in which committees representing consolidated Second and class B noteholders intervened for purpose of opposing proposed plan of reorganization. Decision of the special master is looked for within a short time.

Continental Bank Withdraws Stock

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—Stockholders of the Continental Bank & Trust Co. of New York have voted to withdraw its stock of the bank from trading on the New York Stock Exchange. This action follows a policy adopted some time ago by stockholders of the National City Bank, Chase Bank and others.

Cities Service in Increased Earnings

New York, Jan. 16—Cities Service Co. for year 1929 reports profit after expenses, interest and preferred dividends of $29,581,600 available for common stock and reserves, against $22,876,755 in 1928.

BOND MARKET'S FRESH ISSUES ARE LARGE

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—The largest volume of new bond financing ever floated in a single week during peace-time was attained today with the appearance of loans totalling $20,860,000, bringing the figure for the week to date to $304,-880,000.

The previous high level was the $297,380,000 total recorded early in February, 1927. Half of the current volume, of course, is in the American Telephone Company's $150,000,000 issue, offered on Monday.

A large proportion of the 1930 bond financing is expected to be for the utilities, whose requirements for the present year are estimated at $2,000,000,000. Of this amount some $900,000,000 will be spent for new construction.

Listed bonds held steady in the early trading today despite the weight of the new securities. High-grade issues made slight advances in either direction on moderate orders, a few of the rails, notably Pennsylvania General 4½s, Santa Fe 4½s, Atchison General 4s and Baltimore & Ohio first 5s, eased but there was compensating improvement in other issues of the group.

Utilities and industrials were virtually unchanged. Liggett & Myers 5s rose 1% on a small buying order. Utah Power & Light regained a point, but most of the other light and power bonds were quiet.

Time money was dull but slightly easier at 4½ to 4¾ per cent for all maturities. Call loans renewed at 4½ and went to 4 early in the afternoon. United States government securities responded to the more favorable tone by firming, although there was little business in the liberties and treasuries during the first half of the session.

French governmentals were somewhat ahead. A sizeable block of the 7% changed hands at 120, a point above the 1929 high, while the 5s also went into new high ground at a shade over 114. Norway 5s exceeded last year's peak by a minute margin.

Convertibles did little from the standpoint of volume, while such prices tended higher. American Telephone 4½s were fairly active, making a narrow gain.

Additions Made to the Big List

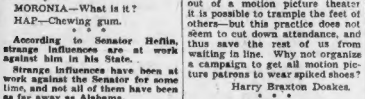
FARM RELIEF DELAYED BY TROUBLE IN RUMBLE SEAT



(Flora, Illinois, Journal-Record)

Tom Griffey sure had two hard fights with his buck sheep. The first fight Griffey throwed corn and clubs at the sheep till John Carrell could come and beef the old sheep. Del Swaney told Griffey to lay flat on the ground when the sheep got after him, but Griffey got tired of staying down on the snow and every time he tried to raise to finish the feeding, the old sheep made for him so he let into following for John Carrell. When John heard the calls he rushed for the garage and out with the car. His folks in the front and John in the rumble seat. But from all reports when Griffey heard the scream that was heard above the roar of the car, John said by the eternals I'm out and helping Tom but one of John s legs was fast in the rumble seat and they had to call up Del Swaney to get John loose s he could help the old sheep. Del pried off the rumble seat. John lit for the feed lot and the hell set.

In cussing and throwing snow balls and clubs by Del and John till Tom got up and tried to cut his throat but his neck was to tough. It almost froze Griffey while on the snow flat on the stomach.

Big Idea Department

B. I. Ed—

In squeezing past people to get out of a motion picture theater it is possible to trample the feet of others—but this practice does not seem to cut down attendance, and thus save the rest of us from waiting in line. Why not organize a campaign to get all motion picture patrons to wear spiked shoes?

BIG SEND-OFF PLANNED FOR GIL ERVIN

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Coming right back at us after our suggestion that a banquet be given R. G. "Gil" Ervin, former head of Curtiss-Wright of New England, we are informed by Bob Foote that a testimonial dinner will be given "Gil" Friday night, Jan. 24.

When we wrote the other day of the big shake-up in the ranks of the Curtiss outfit in New England, we said that the New England head would be either Curtiss-Wright Flying Service of New England, Inc., was no more, and that this significant report directly to New York, thus putting Gil out of a job.

Directly this transpired, Gil checked out, handing in his resignation immediately, and closing his office behind him.

When Gil walked out of the inner office, it was the first step in the economy campaign that is sweeping this outfit. Springfield station will also be washed out, as of Feb. 1.

So, with Gil apparently out of a job, and all the Curtiss-Wright employes in New England liking him as they do, we suggested that a banquet be tendered this boy. That was right in line with the idea, and the thing is under way.

We talked it over with Foote, and we had a hunch that a repetition of the first Curtiss banquet held at the B. A. A. when the outfit got under way in New England about a year ago, would be better.

That party saw every employe of the company in these six States present, and was in the nature of a "meet-the-gang" affair. This coming party, whichever way it is run, will be in the nature of a "show this boy we like and admire him" racket, and what a party it's going to be!

At any rate we are sorry to see Gil leave the company, but we don't question his judgment in the least. Regardless of what he turns his hand to in the future, he will be successful, as he has been with the Curtiss outfit.

The director of publicity of Skyways, Inc., Miss Lorraine Defren, is parked in the Deaconess Hospital, the victim of an automobile crack-up that was driven home on the nice slippery roads, and evidently in an argument with a truck, notoriously bad cusses in an argument.

However, Miss Defren will be on her feet again, giving the gang the low-down on what happens in Skyways, very soon, we hope. In the meantime we have had reports that everybody on the airport told us to tell her that they were sorry to hear she had been hurt, and were her that autos are very dangerous compared to airplanes for one in the aviation business.

HERMAN NEAR CRASH

A bit of thought brought home the fact to J. Paul Herman, pilot with Curtiss-Wright, that when he ferried a Stinson-Detroiter biplane down to Hartford last Saturday, he passed directly over the spot where Marra and Kirkpatrick went into the woods with their Fairchild cabin monoplane.

J. Paul took a direct compass course out of Boston, and split between Hartford and Springfield. He stated that he is generally looking around at the countryside when on a cross-country, but at the time he passed over the lake, he was checking up on the instruments. Had he been looking out he might have found the ship with its two dead occupants days before they were found by ground searchers.

But this is the way of this business. We searched for hours for Dan Collins when he was missing on the mail run several years ago, flying back and forth over the place he went into the woods, and never saw a sign of him. It's rather tough to find a ship in dense woods from the air.

MILLS JOINS E. C.

A former captain in the Army Air Corps, "Rex" Mills is now on the sales staff of the Curtiss Aircraft Corp., according to an announcement made by Frank Lemon, sales manager.

Rex has just returned from an extended tour of the Middle West, during which he studied the aeronautical conditions out there, and is chock full of good ideas.

There is not the slightest doubt but what he will prove an excellent addition to the sales department of East Coast, and the thing for Fred and Frank, Ames and LeMan respectively, are lucky to get him.

How about that hangar in the middle of the field, someoody? We are getting tired trying to get a little action on the stock, and unless something is done pretty soon, it might be just too bad for the airport at large. Big flaming headlines proclaiming a couple of people bumped off won't look nice, so—remove that hangar!

AUCTION BRIDGE

by WILBUR C. WHITEHEAD

I have been most careful in the presentation of my Example Hands to not give "cinch hands" in my opinion, trick hands, that require deep study to work out a winning combination are utterly out of place in articles that have for their object the education of players in the handling of their average run of cards. Actually, this is the only education needed to become a Class A player.

Salient Points of Bidding

Auction is only one No Trump and North is the next take-out need no comment. The only question that could arise in the normal bidding of Hand is, whether East should or should not overcall North's two Hearts with three Clubs. The great trouble with such bid is that in all probability it would be a pure waste of breath. For this reason East passed. South and West also passing, the hand is played in two Hearts.

Contract: The bidding at Contract merely carries the above Auction bidding to its logical conclusion, South assisting North's two Hearts take-out and North, with a six-card suit headed by the Ace-Jack going to four.

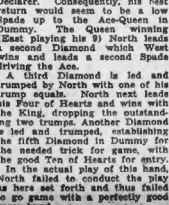
Salient Points of Play

East opens an Ace of Clubs and follows with a low Club, the King winning the second trick in Dummy. East could, of course, have shifted to his doubleton Diamond in hopes of finding West with the Ace-Queen, and thus of securing possibly a ruff on the third round of suit. Had East made this shift, would have simplified North's problem considerably, as such play would establish the King of Diamonds in Dummy without effort on North's part.

As North can shut out a third round Diamond lead by East, the lead of the Ten of Diamonds by East would lose a game that might have been saved except for such lead. The actual play left North in the lead in Dummy with a difficult proposition to make game.

He can count but eight probable tricks, six Hearts, assuming the queen can be captured; one Spade (the Ace), and the King of Clubs already in. A ninth trick is possible should the Queen of Spades cross win. Hence, to obtain the needed tenth trick he must find the Ace of Diamonds in East's hand; or, if in West's hand, he must set up a long Diamond in Dummy before he is forced to take the Spade finesse.

NOT AN EASY HAND TO PLAY



Auction Bidding

	1st Hand	2nd Hand
South	1 N T	Pass
West	Pass	Pass
North	2 ♥	Pass
East	Pass

	Contract Bidding
	1st Rd.	2nd Rd.	3rd Rd.
South	1 N T	4 ♥	Pass
West	Pass	Pass	Pass
North	2 ♥	Pass
East	Pass

Dummy before his re-entries are taken out.

So thought out, North leads the Two of Hearts from Dummy and wins with the Ace. Next he leads the seven of Diamonds towards the King. West winning the trick with the Ace is in a quandary what to return.

To lead a Club would give North a ruff in one hand and a discard in the other. To lead a Diamond, with five of that suit in Dummy, would be playing the hand for the Declarer. Consequently, his best return would seem to be a low Spade up to the Ace-Queen in Dummy. The Queen winning (East playing his 9) North leads a second Diamond which West wins and leads a second Spade driving the Ace.

A third Diamond is led and trumped by North with one of his trump squash. North next leads his Four of Hearts and wins with the King, dropping the outstanding two trumps. Another Diamond is led and trumped, establishing the fifth Diamond in Dummy for the needed trick for game, with the good Ten of Hearts for entry.

In the actual play of this hand, North failed to conduct the play as here set forth and thus failed to go game with a perfectly good game hand.

PREFERS JAIL TO PAYING FINE

New York, Jan. 15 (INS)—Declaring she would go to jail rather than pay a $300 fine imposed last April when she was convicted by a jury in federal court of sending improper matter through the mail, Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett today awaited action in her move to appeal.

Mrs. Dennett appeared before the United States Court of Appeals and asked that the verdict and fine be set aside.

Her attorney submitted a brief in which he pointed out that Judge Burrows had ruled out all testimony regarding the circulation and endorsement of "The Sex Side of Life." Mrs. Dennett's brochure, which was the subject of dispute.

Samoa Natives Flee to Escape Arrest

Apia, Western Samoa, Jan. 16 (AP)—Members of the Mau, the league of native Samoans, have taken to the bush in an attempt to escape from police seeking to carry out orders of the New Zealand administrator, S. S. Allen, who has charged them with fostering a seditious organization.

Police reinforcements, which arrived from New Zealand this week, found but few natives in Apia, although nine native boats anchored near the shore on the western coast were confirmed by Allen.

BOND MARKET'S FRESH ISSUES ARE LARGE

By JOHN L. COOLEY

New York, Jan. 16 (AP)—The largest volume of new bond financing ever floated in a single week during peace-time was attained today with the appearance of loans totalling $20,800,000, bringing the figure for the week to date to $304,-858,000.

The previous high level was the $297,380,000 total recorded early in February, 1927. Half of the current volume, of course, is in the American Telephone Company's $150,000,000 issue, offered on Monday.

A large proportion of the 1930 bond financing is expected to be for the utilities, whose requirements for the present year are estimated at $2,400,000,000. Of this amount some $900,000,000 will be spent for new construction.

Listed bonds held steady in the early trading today despite the weight of the new securities. High grade issues made small changes in either direction on moderate orders, a few of the rails excepted. Pennsylvania General 5s, Union Pacific 4s, Atchison General 4s and Baltimore & Ohio 4½s moved up, but there was compensating improvement in other issues of the ground.

Utilities and industrials were virtually unchanged. Liggett & Myers 5s rose 1½ on a small buying order. Utah Power & Light 5s gained a point, but most of the other light and power bonds were quiet.

Time money was dull, but slightly easier at 4¼ to 4½ per cent for all maturities. Call loans renewed at 4½ and went to 4 early in the afternoon. United States government securities responded to the more favorable tone by firming, although there was little business in the liberties and treasuries during the first half of the session.

French governments again went ahead. A $100,000 block of the 7½s changed hands at 102¾, a point above the 1929 high, while the 7s also went into new high ground at a shade over 114. Norway 5s exceeded last year's peak by a minute margin.

Convertibles did little from the standpoint of volume, although prices tended higher. American Telephone 6½s were fairly active, making a narrow gain.

Additions Made to the Big List

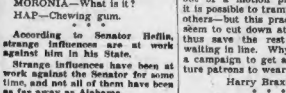
FARM RELIEF DELAYED BY TROUBLE IN RUMBLE SEAT



(Flora, Illinois, Journal-Record)

Tom Griffey sure had two hard fights with his buck sheep. The first fight Griffey throwed corn and clubs at the sheep till John Carrell could come and beef the old sheep. Del Swaney told Griffey to lay flat on the ground when the sheep got after him, but Griffey got tired of staying down on the snow and every time he tried to raise to finish the feeding, the old sheep made for him so he let into hollowing for John Carrell. When John heard the calls he rushed for the garage and cut out the car. His folks in the front and John in the rumble seat. But from all reports when Griffey fetched a scream that was heard above the roar of the car, John said by the eternals I'm out and helping Tom but one of John's legs was fast in the rumble seat and they had to call up Del Swaney to get John loose a ha cousin they fight their old sheep. Dell pried off the rumble seat. John lit for the feed lot and the hell set. In cussing and throwing snow balls and clubs by Del and John till Tom got up and tried to cut his throat but his neck was to tough. It almost froze Griffey while on the snow flat on the stomach.

Big Idea Department

B. I. Ed—

In squeezing past people to get out of a motion picture theater it is possible to trample the feet of others—but this practice does not seem to cut down attendance, and thus save the rest of us from waiting in line. Why not organize a campaign to get all motion picture patrons to wear spiked shoes?

BIG SEND-OFF PLANNED FOR GIL ERVIN

By GEORGE HAMBLIN

Coming right back at us after our suggestion that a banquet be given R. G. "Gil" Ervin, former head of Curtiss-Wright of New England, we are informed by Bob Foote that a testimonial dinner will be given "Gil" Friday night, Jan. 24.

When we went to the other day of the big shake-up in the ranks of the Curtiss outfit in New England, we said that the New England branch, known as Curtiss-Wright Flying Service of New England, Inc., was no more, and that the stations would report directly to New York, thus putting Gil out of a job.

Directly this transpired, Gil checked out, handing in his resignation immediately, and closing his desk in Congress st.

When Gil walked out of the Curtiss office, it was the first step in the economy campaign that is sweeping this outfit. Springfield station will also be washed out, as of Feb 1.

So, with Gil apparently out of a job, and all the Curtiss-Wright employes in New England liking him as they do, we suggested that a banquet be tendered this boy. Foote was right in line with the idea, and the thing is under way.

We talked it over with Foote, and we had a hunch that a reputation of the first Curtiss banquet held at the B. A. A. when the outfit got under way in New England about a year ago, would be better.

That party saw every employe of the company in these six States present, and was in the nature of a "meet-the-gang" affair. This coming party, whichever way it is run, will be in the nature of a "show this boy we like and admire him" racket, and what a party it's going to be!

At any rate we are sorry to see Gil leave the company, but we don't question his judgment in the least. Regardless of what he turns his hand to in the future, he will be successful, as he has been with the Curtiss outfit.

The director of publicity of Skyways, Inc., Miss Geraline Peffers, is parked in the Deaconess Hospital, the victim of an automobile crack-up. She was driving home on the nice slippery roads, and evidently lost an argument with a tree. Fortunately tough customers in an argument.

However, Miss Peffers will be on her feet again, giving the gang the low-down on what happens in Skyways, very soon, we hope. In the meantime we wish her to know that everybody on the airport told us to tell her that they were sorry to hear of her accident, and were sure that autos are very dangerous compared to airplanes for one in the world of business.

HERMAN NEAR CRASH

A bit of thought brought home the fact to J. Paul Herman, pilot with Curtiss-Wright, that when he ferried a Stinson-Detroiter biplane down to Hartford last Saturday, he passed directly over the spot where Marra and Kirkpatrick went into the woods with their Fairchild cabin monoplane.

J. Paul took a direct compass course out of Boston, and split Amston Lake right in half, stated that he is generally looking around at the countryside when on a cross-country, but at the time he passed over the lake, he was checking up on the instruments. Had he been looking out he might have found the ship with its two dead occupants days before they were found by ground searchers.

But this is the way of this business. We searched for hours for the Fairchild, and she was missing on the mail run several years ago, flying back and forth over the place he went in, and never found it, even saw a sign of him. It's rather tough to find a ship in dense woods from the air.

MILLS JOINS E. C.

A former captain in the Army Air Corps, "Rex" Mills is now on the sales staff of the East Coast Aircraft Corp, according to an announcement made by Frank Le-Man, sales manager.

Rex has just returned from an extended tour of the Middle West, during which he studied the aeronautical conditions out there, and is chock full of good ideas.

"East Coast is slightly in doubt but what he will prove an excellent addition to the sales department of East Coast, according to Chief Fred and Frank, Ames and LeMan respectively, are lucky to get him.

How about that hangar in the middle of the field, someondy? We are getting tired trying to get a little action on the shack, and unless something is done pretty soon, it might be just too bad for the airport at large. Big, flaming headlines proclaiming a couple of people bumped off won't look nice, so—remove that hangar!

PREFERS JAIL TO PAYING FINE

New York, Jan. 15 (INS)—Declaring she would go to jail rather than pay a $300 fine imposed last April when she was convicted by a jury in federal court of sending improper matter through the mail, Mrs. Mary Ware Dennett today awaited action in her move to appeal.

Mrs. Dennett appeared before the United States Court of Appeals and asked that the verdict and fine be set aside.

Her attorney submitted a brief in which he pointed out that Judge Burrows had ruled out all testimony regarding the circulation and endorsement of "The Sex Side of Life," Mrs. Dennett's brochure, which was the subject of dispute.

Samoa Natives Flee to Escape Arrest

Apia, Western Samoa, Jan. 16 (AP)—Members of the Mau, the league of native Samoans, have taken to the bush in an attempt to escape from police seeking to carry out orders of the New Zealand administrator, S. S. Allen, who has charged them with fostering a seditious organization.

Police reinforcements, which arrived from New Zealand this week, found but few natives in Apia, although nine native boats anchored near the shore on the western coast were brought here and weapons and literature seized.

Editor Craig Ousted by Presbyterians

Princeton, N. J., Jan. 16 (AP)—Reports that Dr. Samuel G. Craig, former member of the board of directors of Princeton Theological Seminary, had been forced to resign as editor-in-chief of the Presbyterian, were confirmed by the ousting of Dr. Craig was a result of the factional strife within the Princeton seminary and the founding of Westminster Seminary at Philadelphia. Dr. Craig is backing the new seminary.

Union Railroad Terminals Merit and Will Have Public Approval

EVERYONE has experienced the inconvenience of separate railroad passenger stations in American cities.

Everyone has experienced the convenience of a union passenger station.

Hence there will be general agreement with the Interstate Commerce Commission's recommendation that, in the coming railroad consolidations, JOINT TERMINAL FACILITIES for all railroads in each large city shall be established.

Consider the case of New York, with which all are familiar.

All the railroads terminating on the west bank of the Hudson river could and should have been brought to Manhattan Island by tunnel to a JOINT passenger station.

INSTEAD, the Pennsylvania Railroad was allowed to tunnel to Manhattan alone, leaving the five other roads standing, each with a separate passenger terminal, on the New Jersey shore: The Baltimore & Ohio, the Lehigh Valley, the Lackawanna, the Erie and the West Shore. The Baltimore & Ohio is now planning to enter Manhattan by a tremendously expensive bridge over the Hudson.

It takes a memory expert to recite the locations of New York passenger stations. And consider Chicago!

Freight cannot, like passengers, complain of separate railroad terminals, but it is just as much inconvenienced as passengers are.

A MERCHANT shipping a case of goods this afternoon by each of five railroads must send his dray to five different freight stations. If as in some cities the stations are inadequate and crowded, he must send five separate drays to be sure his shipments can be received before the stations are closed this evening and the freight trains made up.

What a convenience is a union freight station which receives all his shipments to all railroads! This convenience has resulted in the formation of scores of PRIVATE union freight terminals from Boston to Los Angeles.

THE union terminal recommendation of the commission is the one that will meet universal approval. Prof. W. Z. Ripley of Harvard, the leading railroad economist of the country, says:

"There are many admirable features of the plan, notably the proposal for open terminals—terminals, that is to say, not tied up to individual systems, but existing for the use of all. Nothing will promote the public interest more than such a plan carefully worked out for the separation of the main stems of the railways from the pick-up-and-delivery systems in and about the greater centers of population."

This is the fourth of a series of editorials on the proposed merger of American railroads. The fifth will appear tomorrow.

The Borough Plan

A Greater Boston With a Central Council Acting for 40 Cities and Towns on Matters of Moment to the Larger Community

APPEARING before one of the committees of the Legislature in favor of his bill calling for the establishment of a Greater Boston, Representative James J. Twohig of South Boston referred to some of our neighbors as "jerk towns."

Mr. Twohig's slang was almost as poor as his judgment. The phrase, long out of date, is "jerk-water." It was applied in olden time to a prairie community of one store, one feed mill, two saloons and from ten to thirty houses, built around a water-tank.

There ARE no "jerk-water" towns in Greater Boston, never have been. Taken altogether, the thirty-nine cities and towns roundabout us have a population of 1,029,225, or nearly a quarter of a million more than the central city.

Mr. Twohig, and any other legislator with a similar plan in view, would do well to leave the promotion of the Greater Boston movement to Mayor Curley and the authorities on municipal government whom the Mayor will ask to make a study of the question.

The Curley plan, as we understand it, is in substance not unlike that which has been advanced in the past by Professor William B. Munro, of Harvard University. It calls for a Greater Boston unified in every way EXCEPT POLITICALLY. As Harvard's professor of Government has said, in more than one public address, he would:

"Let each city and town retain its own Mayor and Council or its own Government and leave for a Central Council the duties of handling things of general importance to the community as a whole.

"Let a Central Council have similar administrative powers to those of the London Council. Most of those powers are now invested in the Metropolitan Commission at the State House and the Legislature. Have the Council care for the parks and the water system—possibly the fire department and policing.

"Greatest of all let the Council care for the planning of a Greater Boston. There is little use of having huge highways within the limits of Boston and in have them stop abruptly and fall into local streets when they reach the boundaries of the city proper.

"There is no city that is growing more rapidly or having such a steady growth as Boston. I have heard people say time and again that Boston is slipping. I don't think it is. It is growing rapidly and the outlying cities and towns of the district are growing even more rapidly."

Mr. Twohig, judging from what he had to say at the State House, would drag these cities and towns into Boston by the hair of the head. His idea of the technique of courtship appears to be that of the cave man.

There is NO hope that any considerable number of Greater Boston cities and towns will favor annexation. No sensible person suggests it.

There are, on the other hand—or there were until Representative Twohig's unfortunate "jerk town" furnished its opponents with the ammunition they required—indications that there is a GROWING sentiment in favor of the "borough" system, with a Central Council acting for the larger community on matters of Greater Boston interest.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, Jan. 16—Wilson Mizner called it "New Yorkitis"—a delusion that one can live only on Manhattan Island. He was himself forced to shake it off by joining an Alaskan gold rush and mushing through snows. And New York has seen little of him since.

There are thousands so hypnotized by the Gotham glitter. They prefer to be the proverbial lamp posts on Broadway rather than go to any other city and be somebody of importance. They are reminiscent of punch-drunk fighters refusing to take the count.

Nowhere do people take so many clips on the chin—and smile. New York, no matter the vicissitudes, is the top of the world to them and any place else is merely camping out. Strangely enough, once they get away for awhile they rarely come back to town.

Yet the majority cannot make the break. The White Way has a vast army of familiars whose lives are spent marking time. They are perpetually buoyed by the bromide of super optimists: "Something is bound to turn up." The fact it doesn't never dampens their ardor.

They manage somehow to live for months and often years while chasing the elusive rainbow. The flimsiest promise of a job around the corner is all they need to carry on. Anyone of them can paint a rosy picture of the future without a sou in his pocket.

The beautiful mannikins of the dressmaking establishments are picking up extra change by piloting gentleman friends into luncheon places in the Fashionable Fifties. They receive 15 per cent of the check.

Such beauties are also able to profit by satisfying the ache of withering Romeos to appear in public with their types of well-dressed and vibrant femininity. It is a strictly business arrangement. They will act as luncheon companions for a fee of $10—and, of course, have luncheon gratis.

For those fed up with the single names of Emil, Antoine, Louis and Pierre as hair cutters, there are two welcome reliefs on lower Sixth ave. One bobbing parlor is conducted by Ike Cohen and another by Patrick McLaughlin.

Al Woods always greets Sammy Shipman with "Hello, Cecil," and is in return greeted with "Hello, Rolfe."

And one of the most irritating fellows I know calls me "Mr. Ashworth." Half others address me as "Art." Nothing makes a fellow feel so inconspicuous as to be called by a wrong name.

"You are on the lookout for strange names," writes one signing himself Ichabod Ilf Awk. "What do you think of mine?"

He's probably kin to the Awks in the comic strips.

H. G. Wells Writes on "The Science of Life"

In Collaboration With Prof. Julian Huxley and George P. Wells

H. G. Wells

The fourth class includes the echinoderms (so-called because they exude sticky, white threads from the anus when disturbed, in order to entangle and confuse their enemies), sea-puddings, sea-cucumbers, sea-urchins, and beche-de-mer, besides a number of curious burrowing, pelagic and deep-sea forms.

They are like sea-urchins that have been softened and pulled out into long sausages, and in the process they have acquired bi-lateral symmetry, for they crawl on one particular side of the body with the mouth in front and the anus behind.

Many of them feed like sea-urchins, shoveling mud into themselves by means of a ring of spade-like tentacles round the mouth.

Others consume minute organisms that float in the sea water; th. wave their sticky tree-like tentacles, entangling the organisms, and then suck them one by one like a small boy sucking jammy fingers.

The fifth class, the feather-stars and sea-lilies, are somewhat different from the rest. They have long, branched arms radiating out from a central disc. The feather-stars swim by sinuous movements of their arms, occasionally anchoring themselves for a shorter or longer period by means of a cluster of claw-like roots.

The sea-lilies are permanently fixed, living at the end of long, jointed stalks.

In addition to these five classes there are curious fossil groups that have become extinct.

In the majority of cases the symmetry of an echinoderm is radial—instead of having two symmetrical sides to his body as we have, he consists of a number of symmetrical structures radiating out from a central disc. This is only true of the adult. A baby echinoderm is typically a minute delicate, transparent creature swimming through the water by means of one or more fringes of cilia that run round its body. Moreover, it is bilerarally symmetrical; it has front and back ends, right and left sides. But presently a set of rudimentary organs appear on its left side, rudiments that grow at its expense like a tumor and finally absorb the whole of the larva, becoming the radially symmetrical adult.

4. Segmented Worms

THE next invertebrate phylum, the Annelida, includes such animals as the earthworms, the leeches and the lugworms—a series of animals which are distinctly like the arthropods in their organization.

They have, however, no rigid armoring and their blood does not fill their body-cavities, but is confined within definite vessels; it may be red as ours is, or it may be green, but it is never colored pale blue by haemocyanin.

In these respects they differ from arthropods. But they have a central nervous system, running along their bellies, and a long, rhythmically contracting artery that plays the part of a heart running along their backs; in these matters, and in the way the nervous system forms a loop round the mouth, they are like arthropods.

Moreover, they are segmented. We noted that the body of any arthropod may be regarded as a modified chain of segments, each of which bears one pair of appendages.

Moreover, in all annelids, except the earthworms and leeches, each segment bears a pair of appendages, not jointed, but bearing tufts of bristles and used in most species as primitive limbs, which strengthens their resemblance to the segments of arthropods.

There are three main groups of annelids. The first includes the burrowing earthworms and one or two similar aquatic forms; one species from Tasmania, attains a length of six feet.

Charles Darwin's book on "Vegetable Moulds and Earthworms" has shown what a vitally important part is played by earthworms in loosening and turning over the soil.

The Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

"MARRIAGE is getting to be just one Great Big Lark!" remarked Mrs. Green, laying down her newspaper and turning to pour a cup of tea for Mrs. Divot.

"Yes," laughed Mrs. Divot. "Marriages used to be made in heaven; but now they are made in airplanes and you catapult straight from the clouds of romance back to earth.

"Or else they are made in Mexico," added Mrs Green. "Or in Paris or in Reno, or wherever a decree can be turned into a license at any minute.

"Well," said Mrs. Divot philosophically, "the spirit of the modern marriage is hardly the Spirit of St. Louis. It has none of that steady purpose and determination to succeed and STICK through fog and cloud and storm which carried Lindbergh across the Atlantic. It is becoming just an experiment or a stunt or a lark, as you say."

"Perhaps that's why most young modern couples are a lot of QUITTERS!" rejoined Mrs. Green. "When you enter marriage with a feeling of impermanence, you are apt to leave it the first moment it bores you.

"Going into matrimony just as a transitory adventure or a temporary arrangement makes it seem more like a tide-over or a make-shift than like a life-partnership. It's like moving into a rented house instead of buying one."

"Exactly," agreed Mrs. Divot. "When you own your house you make an effort to keep UP the place. You develop it and beautify it and plant a garden around it. You feel a sense of obligation toward it and a possessive pride in it.

"And it's the same with marriage. When you look at it as a life proposition you'll spare no effort to make GOOD at it! You'll put up with a lot of little discomforts and adjust yourself to it and beautify it and glorify it until you MAKE it just what you have always dreamed it would be.

"But when you go into marriage feeling that you are just a TRANSIENT and can check out at any moment, you haven't the incentive to work at it very hard. You just feel sort of restless and soon find yourself looking around for an excuse to escape from it."

"And that," said Mrs. Green emphatically, "is why modern divorce lawyers all have gorgeous country estates and own yachts and limousines. They grow rich on our wonderful American sense of humor!"

"Our sense of humor!" repeated Mrs. Divot wonderingly.

"Any nation," said Mrs Green, "that can take marriage as a LARK or a joke MUST have a remarkable sense of humor! Anybody who can see anything funny about a wedding would regard a funeral as a bit of comedy relief!"

Men Must Worship

They Invent Gods If Necessary

(Copyright, 1930)

AN EFFIGY OF QUEEN ALEXANDRA, WORSHIPED IN INDIA

The late Queen Alexandra, mother of King George of England, was loved throughout the British Empire.

The Indian subjects of her husband doubtless heard a great deal about her, and concluded that she ought to make a good goddess.

Therefore they set up this enormous image, showing the Jain idea as to what a Queen of England would probably wear.

And to this day the figure of the dead Queen stands in the Temple of the Jains, at Cawnpore, revered and worshiped by a crowd that comes to ask favors of it.

This worship which would be called "Pagan idolatry" is a natural outgrowth of human nature.

Voltaire said truly: "If there had not been a God, it would have been necessary to invent one."

Barbarians and pagans have invented gods of all sorts, usually making them as much as possible like themselves, with their own fashions and hatreds, jealousies and revenges.

A Greek philosopher said: "If the camels had a god, their god would have four legs and a hump."

Human beings, surrounded by evidences of power incomprehensible, and painfully conscious of their own littleness, instinctively seek for supernatural help.

A million years ago they kneeled begging the lightning not to kill them. They thought it was the weapon of an agry god.

They feared winds howling in the caves, supposing that devils did the howling.

Men must worship something and will invent something to worship.

Meanwhile, science actually IMPROVES CONDITIONS.

Men have harnessed the lightning and it now runs street cars, lights our homes, cooks food, runs electric fans.

Men have taken the wind, compressed it, and made it a vacuum cleaner.

This is an interesting picture and you can think for some time about it.
